General Notes: Features in the painting of The Anti-Slavery Society Convention, 1840, by Benjamin Robert Haydon

Knight, Anne (1786–1862), slavery abolitionist and campaigner for women's rights, was born on 2 November 1786 at Chelmsford, Essex, the third of the eight children of William Knight (1756–1814), wholesale grocer, and his wife, Priscilla, née Allen (1753–1829). Her mother was first cousin to the philanthropist William Allen, while she herself was first cousin to the chemist William Allen Miller. Her younger sister Maria (1791–1870) married in 1814 the abolitionist John Candler (1787–1869) and with him travelled to the West Indies and United States in the anti-slavery cause; they were for some years (1842–6) superintendents of The Retreat, York, the Quaker mental hospital founded by William Tuke.

In 1824, having by then a good knowledge of French and German, Anne Knight travelled on the continent with a group of fellow Quakers, combining sightseeing with religious and philanthropic concerns. From her base in the Chelmsford Ladies' Anti-Slavery Society she was deeply involved with the anti-slavery movement, travelling frequently to London and working with Thomas Clarkson, Joseph Sturge, Richard and Hannah Webb, and Elizabeth Pease (later Nichol). During the 1830s she returned several times to France in the same cause, in 1834 undertaking a speaking tour. The 1840 World's Anti-Slavery Convention in London gave her the opportunity to meet such American abolitionists as William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and Lucretia Mott. The movement for women's suffrage in Britain has been dated from the exclusion of women from the floor of this conference, for it drew women's attention to their marginal status within the movement, and highlighted the limitations placed on their capacity to act in the public sphere. In July 1848 the first women's rights convention in the United States was held at Seneca Falls, New York. The previous year an anonymous leaflet was issued in Britain claiming that 'Never will the nations of the earth be well governed, until both sexes, as well as all parties, are fully represented and have an influence, a voice, and a hand in the enactment and administration of the laws'. It has been persuasively argued that the author was Anne Knight. Certainly from the 1840s she had been writing frequent letters (she was a voluminous correspondent) to American abolitionists, including Angelina Grimké, and she was capable of sharp rejoinders to Chartists who suggested that the class struggle took precedence over that for women's rights.

Although Knight was in many ways typical of nonconformist women abolitionists, her views were more radical than many: a sympathizer with Chartism, she was interested in the British and French utopian socialist movements, maintained links with the White Quakers in Ireland, and in the 1840s supported the radical Garrisonian wing of the American abolition movement. Her support for women's rights led her in 1851 to be involved in forming the first organization for women's suffrage in Britain, the Sheffield Female Reform Association. In 1847 or 1848 Anne Knight left Chelmsford for Paris and, after living there enthusiastically (despite her Quaker upbringing) through the year of revolutions, she was at the international peace conference in Paris in 1849. Lucretia Mott described her in the 1840s as 'a singular looking woman—very pleasant and polite' (F. B. Tolles, ed., Slavery and 'the Woman Question', 1952, 29).

In the late 1850s Anne Knight moved to Waldersbach, a village in the Vosges, south-west of Strasbourg. This had been the home of the pastor Jean-Frédéric Oberlin (1740–1820), whose philanthropic work she revered. Here she lived for the last few years of her life, lodging with Oberlin's grandson, and died there after a short illness on 4 November 1862.

Researches into Anne Knight's life have been hindered by persistent confusion of her with another Anne Knight [née Waspe] (1792–1860), children's writer. This Anne Knight was born at Woodbridge, Suffolk, on 28 October 1792, the eldest of the eight children of Jonathan Waspe (1756?–1818), a leather-cutter, and his wife, Phebe, née Gibbs (1761–1851). She married in 1818 her first cousin and fellow Quaker James Knight (1794–1820) of Southwark. After her husband's early death, she returned to Woodbridge, where by 1826 she was keeping a school. She was a close friend of the poet Bernard Barton, and is frequently mentioned in Charles Lamb's letters to him. She was the author of a number of books for children, certainly School-Room Lyrics (1846), and most probably of Poetic Gleanings (1827), Mornings in the Library (1828), with a prefatory poem by Barton, and Mary Gray (1831), works which were previously ascribed to Anne Knight the social campaigner. Anne Knight the author died at her home in Woodbridge on 11 December 1860, and was buried in the Ouaker burial-ground there.

General Notes: Francis Bowyer Miller (1828-1887), assayer, was born on 18 December 1828 at Edgbaston, Warwickshire, England, youngest son of William Miller, brewer, and his wife Frances Bowyer, née Vaux, a writer of children's books. Both parents were Quakers, and the Miller and Vaux families were active in agitation against the slave trade. Francis was educated at King Edward's Grammar School, Birmingham, and King's College, London. In 1849 he joined a British Admiralty expedition to the Bight of Benin, Africa, to see if lagoons there could be used by British gunboats in the suppression of the slave trade. Returning to England about 1850, he worked with a mining company in Cornwall for twelve months then became an assistant to his brother William, professor of chemistry at King's College and non-resident assayer to the Royal Mint and the Bank of England.

In November 1853 Francis Miller and W. S. Jevons were appointed to the newly established Sydney branch of the Royal Mint, partly on William Miller's recommendation. Offered a retainer of £100 per annum, they were expected to establish their own assay offices and to undertake work for private banks and individuals as well as for the mint on piece rates. By the time the mint opened in May 1855, however, he and Jevons had become full-time public servants with no need to take private work. On 11 January 1854 in the Parish Church of St Clement Danes, Westminster, Miller had married Alicia, only daughter of Maurice Fitzgerald O'Connell, R.N. Two months later the Millers sailed with their servant for Sydney in the Granite City. They were to have four children.

On arrival in Sydney, Miller set up an assay office in Bligh Street. In November 1859 he became a member of the Philosophical (later Royal) Society of New South Wales, before which, in July 1860, he read a paper on the detection of spurious gold, concerned in particular with a species of fake gold 'nuggets' that had deceived many Sydney storekeepers. Rachel Henning, to whom he showed a sample 'nugget' at Bathurst in July 1861, found him to be 'rather a clever, agreeable man'.

Miller's crowning scientific achievement was his development of a process of refining and toughening gold by means of chlorine gas. He patented this process in London in June 1867 and registered it as an invention before the New South Wales Legislative Assembly in November. Twelve months later his paper describing the process was read before the Chemical Society, London, and by December 1869, when Miller read another paper on the subject before the Royal Society of New South Wales, his method had been successfully put into operation at the Sydney Mint and by the Bank of New Zealand at Auckland, New Zealand.

In 1870 Miller was transferred to the new Melbourne branch of the Royal Mint, and was paid £2000 for the sole Victorian rights to the gold-refining process. He sold the 'remarkably handsome Gothic villa and grounds' that he had built on the waterfront at Double Bay and relocated his family to the Melbourne suburb of Kew. By then Miller's method had been introduced into mints in England, the United States of America and Norway and he had travelled to England and the U.S.A. to advise on the process.

Superintendent of the bullion office at the Melbourne Mint from 1877, in 1884 he was briefly acting deputy master. Chronic Bright's disease forced him to take sick leave from June 1887 and he died in his home at Kew on 17 September 1887, survived by his wife, two sons and one daughter. He was buried with Anglican rites in Boroondara cemetery. At the time of his death he was a member of the Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, a fellow of the Chemical Society of London and of the Institute of Chemistry of Great Britain and a corresponding member of the Royal Society of New South Wales. In 2005 the Miller process was still used worldwide to treat molten gold.

General Notes: Sturge, William (1820–1905), surveyor and land agent, was born on 21 August 1820 in Bristol, the eldest of four sons and four daughters of Jacob Player Sturge (1793–1857), of Y. and J. P. Sturge, surveyors and land agents of Bristol, and his wife, Sarah (1789–1867), daughter of William and Ann Stephens of Bridport. His father was a cousin of Joseph Sturge (1793–1859), philanthropist. William Sturge, of a Quaker family, attended schools at Sidcot near Winscombe, Somerset, and at Fishponds, Bristol. He married Charlotte Allen (1817–1891) of Stoke Newington in June 1846; they had eleven children. A son, William, was responsible for the Sturge flint collection presented to the British Museum; his daughter, Emily Sturge, became a campaigner for women's education and suffrage. On leaving school in 1836 Sturge entered the family firm of Y. and J. P. Sturge of Bristol, which was run by his uncle, Young Sturge, who had opened the Bristol office, and his father, Jacob Player Sturge. The business had been started in 1760 by John Player of Stoke Gifford, who was joined by his nephew Jacob Player Sturge, father of Young and Jacob Player. William Sturge became a partner in 1842, and head of the firm at his father's death in 1857. The practice was named J. P. Sturge & Sons after Young's death in 1844. Sturge's brothers Walter and Robert, the latter a member of the Institution of Surveyors, became junior partners. During Sturge's association with the practice, until 1905, it was situated in Bristol at 1 Broad Street and 34 and 33 Corn Street respectively. It merged with King & Co. of London in 1992 to become King Sturge & Co. of London and Bristol, with other UK and European offices.

Sturge was involved in surveying and mapping land in connection with the Enclosure and Tithe Commutation Acts, with railways, and with Bristol residential developments. He was appointed surveyor to the Bristol Water Works Company in 1846 and was arbitrator or witness in many compensation cases concerning land purchase for railways in the west of England and south Wales; one particular case concerned the local board of health and the Great Western Railway Company in 1870. In 1847–8 he was responsible for purchasing land for the Bristol and Exeter, and the Wilts., Somerset, and Weymouth railways. He followed his uncle and father respectively as land steward to the corporation of Bristol in 1857, a post he held until 1905. He was appointed to survey the city of Bristol for assessment of the borough rate in 1860 and 1870, and he advised the Somerset county rate committee on the county rate in 1865 and undertook this for Glamorgan in 1875. Under the Extraordinary Tithe Act of 1888 Sturge was appointed assistant commissioner. He trained land agents and surveyors, and he and his brother Robert founded the Bristol branch of the Surveyors' Institution.

A founder member of the Institution of Surveyors (later the Surveyors' Institution, followed by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors) Sturge was a member of the council in 1868, and served as president from 1878–80. He presented ten papers at the institution between 1868 and 1899. These were published subsequently in the Transactions, and included his presidential addresses (1878–9), 'The education of the surveyor' (1868), 'Tithes and tithe commutation' (1871), 'The Rating Act' (1874), and 'The burdens on real property and land' (1894). He continued to write on the subject of rating in Professional Notes (1904), when he was over eighty years old. He was also author of several personal memoirs, as well as A Report on the Farming of Somersetshire, an entry for a Royal Society of Sturge died from heart failure at his home, Chilliswood, Tyndall's Park Road, Bristol, on 26 March 1905. His obituary in the Transactions of the Surveyors' Institution (1905) described his calm judgement and keen practical insight, as well as his scrupulous honesty, 'almost painfully keen to do justice to all parties'. He was serious but with a 'quiet restrained humour', and gentle, but with a 'flame of wrath ready to burn fiercely should occasion demand it'. His publications showed concern about the agricultural depression, the conditions of farm labourers, and the future of agriculture and of his own profession. His main interests were business, religion, and family; he was a member of the Religious Society of Friends throughout his life.

8-Emily Sturge<sup>6,7</sup> was born on 20 Apr 1847 in Highbury Villa, Cotham New Road, Cotham, Bristol, Gloucestershire, died on 3 Jun 1892 in Chilliswood, Tyndall's Park, Cotham, Bristol, Gloucestershire at age 45, and was buried in FBG Friars, Rosemary Street, Bristol. The cause of her death was From injuries, having been thrown from her horse.

General Notes: Sturge, Emily (1847–1892), campaigner for women's education and suffrage, was born on 20 April 1847 at Highbury Villa, Cotham New Road, Cotham, Bristol, the eldest of the eleven children of William Sturge (1820–1905) and his wife, Charlotte Allen Sturge (1817–1891). Four of her sisters were also involved to a greater and lesser extent in the movement for women's education. The Sturge family were prominent members of the Society of Friends and were linked by marriage and descent to a number of Quaker families. Emily was a great-niece of the Quaker Ann(e) Knight who had campaigned for women's right to vote in the 1840s, and in the memoir of Emily (1892) Charlotte Sturge wrote that Ann Knight 'would have rejoiced to see how far her desires have been fulfilled and will probably be yet further carried out' (Goodbody, 50).

William Sturge was a partner in the family business of surveying which prospered in the nineteenth century. In 1864 the family moved into Chilliswood (later part of the University of Bristol) in Cotham, and the third daughter, Elizabeth, lived there until her death in 1944 at the age of ninety-four. The house was a centre for visiting lecturers and for drawing-room meetings during the suffrage campaigns of the 1870s. Emily was described by her Aunt Matilda as 'shy and sensitive in infancy' (E. Sturge, 79), and this developed into a deep reserve which gave the impression of aloofness. She was also 'a woman of considerable personal attractions, a little above the middle height, with good features, a fine bearing, and magnificent hair, which gave a certain distinction to her appearance' (ibid., 84). In early life she broke away from the evangelicalism of her upbringing, and experienced periods of religious doubt, though she continued to attend Friends' meetings all her life. Her sister Elizabeth said that 'we—her sisters—hardly knew how much strong feeling her rather cold and distant manner covered until, after her death, her private memoranda revealed it' (ibid., 79). In one of these memoranda Emily wonders how it is that I come to be where I am—how it has come about that I am absorbed in the practical work of life. If the line of least resistance had not lain in this direction I could have lived the student's life. (Goodbody, 44)

After attending schools at Weston-super-Mare and then Frenchay, near Bristol, Emily's own education was cut short at the age of about fourteen, and thereafter she was largely self-taught. In contemplating the life of a student Emily may have been envying her younger sisters Mary Charlotte, known as Carta (1852–1929), and Caroline (1861–1922), who attended the University College which opened at Bristol in 1876. Carta went on to study at Newnham College, Cambridge, gaining the moral science tripos in 1887, and Caroline qualified as a doctor at London University. One of Emily's brothers, William Allen Sturge (1850–1919), was also medically qualified and married to Dr Emily Bovell, one of the seven female medical students expelled from Edinburgh University during the Sophie Jex-Blake struggle for women's access to medical training in the early 1870s.

The 'practical work' of Emily Sturge's brief life was almost wholly concerned with promoting women's suffrage and women's education. From 1878 until her death she was honorary secretary of the west of England branch of the National Society for Women's Suffrage. The West of England Suffrage Society had been formed in Bristol in 1868 at the home of Matthew Davenport Hill, whose daughter Florence was a founding member. Emily Sturge was a member by 1872–3, and from the 1870s until about 1885 she was involved in travelling to public meetings, giving public speeches, and campaigning through the Liberal Party to obtain women's franchise by electoral reform. She was a member of the Bristol Women's Liberal Association, formed about 1880 alongside similar branches formed in other Quaker strongholds, whereby parliamentary and municipal candidates were asked to state their views of women's suffrage. Women were not enfranchised by Gladstone's 1884–5 reforms and Emily Sturge moved across to support the Liberal Unionists in the home rule split. She was a member of the committee of the West Bristol Temperance Society.

Emily Sturge was elected as a Liberal to the Bristol school board in January 1880. School boards were the first form of elected body open to women, and Emily succeeded Helena Richardson as the second woman member, having come second in the poll at the age of thirty-two. She had experience of teaching in a Friends' Sunday school, and took an interest in an elementary school for girls run by the British and Foreign School Society. During her membership of the board she campaigned for free school meals, established as 'penny dinners' in 1884; was involved in the setting up of evening schools, chairing the evening school committee from 1886; and was concerned to ensure equal access for women and girls to technical instruction and to promote the training and status of women teachers.

Emily Sturge achieved the latter aim through the new University College, founded in 1876. The college was a direct result of the Clifton Association for Promoting Higher Education for Women, formed in Bristol in 1868. The association founded the Lectures for Ladies in the 1860s, which were attended by the Sturge sisters and are described by Elizabeth Sturge in her Reminiscences (1928). The new University College, to become the University of Bristol in 1909, was open to both men and women, except for the medical school. In its early years money was a problem and Emily Sturge organized a successful fund-raising campaign in the late 1880s. She helped to establish a day training school for women teachers at the University College, which opened in October 1892: Marion Pease, a graduate of the new University College and a member of another key Bristol Quaker family, the Frys, was appointed the first mistress of method.

Emily Sturge was also involved in setting up at Bristol a school of cookery to train domestic science teachers, using moneys set aside by the technical instruction committee of the town council, and derived from the Technical Instruction Act of 1889 and the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Act of 1890. Unlike the school boards, town councils were still restricted to men, and following receipt of a memorial from 'certain ladies' in October 1891, Emily Sturge, who wanted grants for technical education to benefit girls as well as boys, was invited to assist with the formation of the school of cookery. It was to open in September 1893. Emily Sturge was re-elected to the Bristol school board in January 1892 shortly before her death at her home, Chilliswood, Tyndall's Park, Cotham, Bristol, on 3 June 1892, from injuries sustained after being thrown from her horse. She was buried in the Quaker burial-ground at Friars Meeting-House, Rosemary Street, Bristol.

General Notes: WILLIAM ALLEN STURGE, M.V.O., MT.D.LOND., F.R.C.P. IN Dr. Allen Sturge, who passed away on March 27th after several years of cardiac instability and poor health, we have lost an accomplished physician and a distinguished archaeologist. He came of a fine Quaker sbock on both sides. He was born at Bristol in 1850, and began his professional studies at the Bristol Medical School, and continued them at University College Hospital, London, where he soon made his mark and gained "the warm regard of his teachers and of his fellow students. He was a close and accurate observer, keen in reasoning and original in speculation. After holding the post of physician's-assistant he became a resident officer and subsequently registrar at the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy. There he laid the foundations of a wide and thoughtful survey of nervous diseases. Having taken his M.D. at the University of London, he followed up his studies in nervous diseases by a lengthened stay in Paris in 1876. That was a time when Chlarcot, like a magnet, was attracting neurologists young and old to his clinic at the Salpetriore. But Sturge did not limit his studies to neurology; he worked at general pathiology and medicine, and followed closely Fournier's practice at the St. Louis. Both Charcot and Fourn'ier bore generous testimony in after years to Sturge's critical acumen and originality. When in 1877 he returned to London ritical acumen and originality. When in 1877 he returned to London he was appointed physician and pathologist to the Royal Free Hospital, and one of the lecturers to the Women's Medical School. His strong liberal sentiments made Itkia an early and warm supporter of women's medical education. He was married to a talented lady doctor-Miss Emily Bovell-and they started in practice in Wimpole Street. There seemed a distinguished career opening for Sturge as a neurologist, a general phy'sdcian, and a clinical -teacher. He had the gift of fluents aizd luminous exposition, and was eagerly listened to, not only by his students, but by the members of the Londoni medical societies. Unfortunately there only remain four of his medical' papers available. Of these, in every way the most important and characteristic is one in the fifth volume of the Proceedings of the Medical Society of London, p. 357, on', this study of muscular atrophy as an aid to the physiological investigation of the spinal cord. In this paper there are some original clinical observations of considerable interest, but there are also very lucid, and discriminating statements on the physiological grouping of muscular atrophies and their diagnostic importance which are valuable still as sound and helpful generalizations. His three papers in the twelfth and fourteenth volumes of the Clinical Society's transactions on a case of erythromelalgia, on a case of spondylitis, and on nerve stretching are good examples of Sturge's gift of not only narrating the salient features of any case, but of setting fortly it general bearing. Sturge was exceedingly humane. From his studentship, onwards he took the 'deepest interest in the welfare of hip patients. He never spared his efforts, especially for peo chronic nervous cases, to make the tI of their condition, and he was so well read anod wide in his it, ellectual sympathies that it was no wonder that many educated men and 'women found in 'him a tower of strength, especially in conditions of overstrain. But in 18 his wife's . 4th began seriously to flag, and he- came to the conclusi8;"that for her saie he ought to seek amilder climate. Te determined to settle in Nice, and he made it his homp for twenty-seven years during the late..... etc. etc. SEE....

William Allen Sturge was born of Quaker parents in Bristol, where his father, William Sturge, was a wealthy surveyor. He attended local schools until 1865 when he was sent to a Quaker school in London. There, while playing soccer, he injured his knees. He stayed with his uncle while he was recuperating from the knee injury. His uncle, a physician, had sons studying medicine, and it was during this stay that William developed an interest in medicine. This was contrary to his father's wishes; wanting instead that his son take up the family business. His father relented, however, and allowed him to pursue his interest in medicine. He commenced his medical studies at Bristol Medical School in 1868. He was a very industrious young man who, in the pursuit of his interests, neglected his own health. He fell ill of diphtheria in June, 1869. In August, after recovering from the illness, William went on vacation in Switzerland with his family. While there he developed rheumatic fever, an illness that lasted for several weeks. After recovering, he resumed his studies and passed the Primary Examination of the College of Surgeons in 1870. He went to London in 1871 to continue his studies at University College, but had a second attack of rheumatic fever in 1872 which forced him to take a prolonged rest. His father sent him on a tour in the East in 1873. As a medical attendant, William accompanied a wealthy young man named Lukas to Egypt. After returning from Egypt he resumed his medical studies and received his medical degree from University College, London, in 1873. After holding the post of Physician's Assistant, he became a resident medical officer and subsequently registrar of the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy and here commenced his interest in neurology. In 1876 he went to Paris to study with Jean Martin Charcot (1825-1893), but also gained experience in general pathology and medicine with Jean Alfred Fournier (1832-1915) at the St. Louis Hospital. Both Charcot and Fournier were highly impressed with Sturge's intelligence and originality. It was in Paris that he met his wife, Emily Bovell, who was also a physician. Emily Bovell was one of the original half dozen women who gained admission to the Medical School of Edinburgh University, only to be physically ejected by the male students and faculty. All of these women eventually completed their medical training elsewhere and all achieved distinction in their own particular field. Sturge was strongly liberal and was one of the keenest supporters of women's medical education. They married in September 1877 and returned to London to set up a practice together in Wimpole Street. He was appointed physician and pathologist to the Royal Free Hospital, and a lecturer to the Women's Medical School. He was a fine speaker, an excellent teacher and extremely interested in the welfare of his patients. He had a very large practice of patients with organic conditions and also of patients with psychosomatic problems. In 1880 his wife became ill and Sturge decided to move to Nice, where he lived for the next 27 years during the autumn, winter and spring. He gradually became very well known and socially prominent as a physician in the Riviera and looked after Queen Victoria and her family during her four visits to Cimez. In recognition of this service, Queen Victoria awarded him gifts and an MVO, which is an order and decoration reserved for people who have rendered service to the Royal Family of a personal nature. Emily Boyell died in her early 40's in 1885. The following year William married Julia Sherriff, who was his nurse in Nice. Julia was the daughter of a wealthy iron master in the North of England. Because of the summer heat in Nice, the couple used to take their vacations at this time of the year. Sturge was very fond of travelling. It was during his travels that he became greatly interested in archaeology and began to collect Greek vases and Palaeolithic and Neolithic flint implements. He had rheumatic fever in 1894 which recurred in 1899 and in 1907 he decided to give up practice and return to England. During his holidays he studied early Greek art and was a collector of Etruscan vases, devoting most of his leisure time to the study of archaeology. He settled at Icklingham Hall in Suffolk, which was near the diggings where the Piltdown skull was found. There he established one of the finest private museums of flint implements in the world, carefully classified and catalogued. His collection of more than 100.000 pieces is now in the British Museum. Sturge was one of the founders and first president of the Society of Prehistoric Archaeology of East Anglia His collection of Greek amphora is housed in the Toronto Museum, Canada as the Sturge Collection

In the winter of 1918 he suffered from influenza and then nephritis and subsequently died in March 1919. William Sturge left no children to bear his name.

General Notes: "E. Jane Gay was born in Nashua, New Hampshire in 1830 and was educated in New York. In 1856, she traveled with her friend Catherine Melville to Macon, Georgia to found a school for young women. Gay taught at the school until its closing in 1860, and went on to administer a Washington, DC school for children with Melville until the outbreak of the US Civil War in 1861. From 1861 to 1865, Gay worked alongside Dorothea Lynde Dix as a nurse tending to wounded soldiers for the Union Army. After the war, Gay worked first as a tutor to President Andrew Johnson's grandchildren, then as a clerk in a dead-letter office (1866–1883). In 1888, Gay began teaching herself photography. In 1889, she was hired as the photographer and cook for an expedition led by anthropologist Alice C. Fletcher, an old friend and agent for the US Department of the Interior's Bureau of Indian Affairs. From 1889 to 1893, Gay traveled as the photographer with the expedition to the Nez Perce Indian Reservation in Idaho. Gay's letters and photographs vividly capture the expedition's experiences with the Nez Perce in the American West. After her return from the West, Gay lived in Washington, DC until 1906, when she traveled to Europe with one of her nieces, Emma Jane Gay (1859–1924). While in England, Gay and her niece published her photographs, illustrations, and letters from the Fletcher expedition to the Nez Perce in a two-volume book entitled Choup-nit-ki, With the Nez Perce. Besides providing a first-hand account of US policy toward the American Indians under the Dawes Act, the book is an excellent window into the social conditions on the American frontier in the late 19th century.

After publishing Choup-nit-ki, With the Nez Perce, Gay decided to remain in Somerset, England, where she lived with her friend Dr. Caroline Sturge. Gay died in England in 1919 at the age of 89.

Hingston Fox was born at Stoke Newington, the third of the seven medical sons of Joseph John Fox, a Quaker surgeon from Cornwall, and his wife Sarah Angell Allen of Stoke Newington. He qualified from the London Hospital in 1874, and, after a resident appointment in the Royal Cornwall Infirmary, made a voyage to Australia as a ship's surgeon, to ward off threatened pulmonary tuberculosis. On his return he assisted his father in general practice, and at the same time established a footing in Finsbury Circus and began work for life assurance companies, which later claimed a large share of his energies. He began consulting practice in 1902 and was assistant physician to the Mount Vernon Hospital for Consumption from 1916 to 1919. The affairs of the Hunterian Society, of which he was president in 1912, and medical history occupied much of his leisure. He published a book on Dr. John Fothergill and his Friends in 1919. Fox was a quiet and devout man, a Greek and Hebrew scholar, and a student of geology and birds and trees. He married in 1879 Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Tylor, and had one son and seven daughters. He was a brother of R. F. Fox, F.R.C.P. He died at his home at Jordans, Beaconsfield.

J. TYLOR FOX

J. Tylor Fox was the son of R. Kingston Fox and Elizabeth Tylor, and came of a long line of doctors; no less than six generations. He was at Bootham in 1898-9 before the time when any serious work in Biology was done, and in fact some years before the College Class was started. On leaving he went to the City of London School, whence he proceeded by scholarship to Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, and to the London Hospital from which he qualified as medical practitioner in 1910.

During the first world war he acted as medical officer under the Friend's war-victims service at Buzuluk, in the famine area in Russia. Returning to England in 1918, he became medical superintendent of the Lingfield Epileptic Colony in Surrey and wrote many articles on the treatment of the disease for scientific journals. His work at Lingfield was continued under great difficulties through the second world war, part of the colony being severely damaged by a flying bomb and a number of patients being evacuated to Mansfield. This involved a considerable amount of travel to and fro under very wearing conditions, and shortly after peace was declared, his health made retirement advisable. He continued, however, to work for epileptics, and was the means of fitting many of them into places where they could be useful in the community at large.

This bare skeleton of the events of his career fails to give a clear picture in two important respects. In the first place, it does not succeed in showing his great eminence as an authority on the subject which was specially his own, and in the second it fails to make clear the lovable humility of his character, which at a first meeting sometimes concealed this, but when one knew him better so much enhanced it. He married Elsie, daughter of the late Edwin Gilbert. She survives him with a daughter and two sons, both of whom are following the medical profession.

General Notes: Robert Fortescue Fox b.24 Dec 1858 d.15 June 1940 MD Lond MRCS LSA FRCP (1925)

Fortescue Fox was the seventh son of Joseph John Fox, a Stoke Newington surgeon who came of a Cornish Quaker family, and his wife Sarah Angell Allen. He qualified at the London Hospital in 1882 and was house physician to Sir Andrew Clark; but precarious health took him away from hospital work, first on a voyage to China as a ship's surgeon, and then to a temporary post at Strathpeffer Spa in Ross-shire, where he remained to practise for twenty years. He returned to London finally in 1905, and in 1913, when he produced his Principles and Practice of Medical Hydrology, he was already accepted as an authority on British and foreign spas. During the 1914-1918 War his specialised practice vanished and he concentrated on the care of the disabled. He insisted on the value of various forms of baths and exercise for the restoration of injured limbs; he wrote Physical Remedies for Disabled Soldiers (1917), worked with Sir Robert Jones at the Military Orthopaedic Hospital, Shepherd's Bush, and introduced the "whirlpool" arm and leg baths. A pioneer of what was later called rehabilitation, he was impressed by the need for concurrent treatment and training of the disabled, and his ideas on this and on resettlement were partially realised in the Enham Village Centre, of which he was for a year the first medical director.

As a physician, he was interested in people even more than in diseases, and his approach to each case was correspondingly personal, including a search for environmental or social factors in the illness. A therapist by nature, he made full use of drugs, but was unfashionable in his faith in " airs, waters, and places " as remedial agents. He urged that clinics should be set up in cities to reduce rheumatic disabilities, and the British Red Cross Clinic for Rheumatism was largely the result of his leadership and planning. But he was also eager that spas and coastal resorts should be used more widely, with financial aid from public funds for poorer patients, and he helped to found the British Health Resorts Association. To promote the scientific study of climates and waters, he formed the International Society of Medical Hydrology and edited its Archives for several years from 1922. When, in his old age, some of his foreign associates became political refugees, he spared no pains to help them. Fox remained active in practice and in persuasive writing until the last days of a life of ardent and often far-sighted effort. Sensitive and latterly frail, he felt acutely the rebuffs that come to innovators. But he had many compensating interests— in poetry, archaeology, travel, painting and gardening. He married the daughter of Rev. W. S. McDougall and had three daughters and three sons— one of them T. F. Fox, F.R.C.P. He was a brother of R. Hingston Fox, F.R.C.P. He died in London.

Sir Theodore Fox, a medical editor who exerted a profoundly beneficial influence on the practice of medicine in his time, began his work on the staff of The Lancet in 1925 and he retired in 1964, after 20 years as its editor. He came from a long family line of Quaker doctors and his mother was the daughter of a Presbyterian minister in the Scottish Highlands - an ancestry that hardly gave him a taste for relaxation or merriment but imbued him with a dedication and a resolve to see right prevail, which infused all he did. From Leighton Park School he won a scholarship to Pembroke College, Cambridge. In 1917 he wanted to join the Army but his family persuaded him to enter the Friends Ambulance Unit and he became an orderly on an ambulance train in France. When the war was over he went up to Cambridge and subsequently became house physician to Sir Robert Hutchison [Munk's Roll, Vol.V, p.208] at the London Hospital. Later, after an expedition to India as a ship's surgeon, he accepted an offer of locum work from the editor of The Lancet - a post which became more than temporary.

With the advent of the 1939-45 war, Fox spent three years in the RAMC including a year as a regimental medical officer, some of the time in France. Later he worked in the Army blood transfusion service and edited the Army Medical Department Bulletin at the War Office. The Lancets request for his return was eventually granted and he rejoined the journal's staff at its wartime office in Aylesbury, before its return to London with Fox as editor. He was soon deep in the often turbulent discussion about the coming National Health Service in Britain. The Lancet set out to argue the case for freeing medicine from the 'marketplace' and for eschewing the fee-for-service which many doctors wanted. Though Fox wished to see the establishment of an organized State service he never missed an opportunity to remind the profession that its prime duty would still be to patients and that doctors should never regard themselves as mere technical workers in a State-run and State-financed service. When a niggling editorial in the British Medical Journal suggested that the BMA's attitude should be to cooperate with the NHS while acting as a watchdog for the profession, The Lancet retaliated: 'Since when has cooperation become an attribute of watchdogs?' His journal's influence at this time was considerable perhaps even crucial to the outcome, for if the NHS had not begun in 1948 more or less under the terms that Fox supported in face of much professional opposition then it is unlikely that subsequent efforts to establish a non-fee-for-service system would have prevailed. He would probably have looked with misgiving on some moves begun in the late 80s to reintroduce another kind of 'marketplace' into a service which he always hoped would remove all financial impediments to satisfactory care - on the frail assumption that the Exchequer could invariably be persuaded to provide enough money.

A landmark in Fox's early years as editor was the publication of the Collings Report (The Lancet 1950;i:555-85) which illustrated, through the eyes of an Australian visitor, the imperfections of general practice in Britain. Hopes that the NHS would speedily improve matters proved vain, but the coming of the College of General Practitioners - in which Fox had a hand - and the growing appreciation of the importance of primary care fostered by his journal, eventually raised the standards and status of general practice from the level of a retreat for the unambitious graduate or the failed specialist. In 1961 he recognized the significance of the Christ Church conference on postgraduate medical education and he published George Pickering's commentary [Munk's Roll, Vol.VII, p.464] on its conclusions, thereby hastening the emergence of a more active on-going medical education. Fox had a talent for grasping the essential achievements and failures of health care in other lands. Short visits to the Soviet Union (1954), China (1957), the United States (1960) and Australia and New Zealand (1963) were cues for penetrating articles on what had been achieved and what was lacking in the health systems of these countries. Despite the mass of fact and observation with which he had to grapple, he made these commentaries illuminating and entertaining. Outstanding among his other signed contributions to the journal was his 1965 Harveian Oration entitled 'Purposes of Medicine'. Here he declared again that the primary role of doctors was to help people rather than to advance science, and he maintained that they should not prolong life against the patient's interest: 'I do not believe that confidence in our profession depends on following rules at the expense of people.' Another passage reads poignantly today in the shadow of events in many tormented parts of the world where doctors have been victimized because their actions were seen as contrary to the will of those in power: 'In principle ... nations allow that Medicine has a more advanced code than their own - that the doctor is right to put his duty to the human race before his duty to any of its component groups ... However uncertain and tentative, he is a prototype of supranational man.' One of his earlier pieces, 'The Greater Medical Profession' (The Lancet 1956;ii:779-80) has also been much quoted. He wrote of the medical empire transforming itself into a commonwealth with more and more of its colonies and dominions becoming wholly or partly independent. He helped many readers to recognize that medicine should be seen as only one member in a family of professions, among whom cooperation rather than financial competition was vital to the success of any health service. With all these thoughtful and elegant texts, and with many more, Fox enlivened the pages of his journal and compelled his readers to think about what they and their colleagues were doing both individually and in their corporate actions. At the same time, over the years, he encompassed the daily tasks of an editor upon whose desk papers and letters fell in mounting numbers as medicine became ever more scientific in the surge of genetics, immunology, and molecular biology clamouring for places in a general journal. In his time The Lancet sought advice from outside advisers on submitted papers much less often than it came to do in later years. Fox's Heath Clark lectures of 1963 - published as a book, Crisis in Communication, London, The Athlone Press, 1965 - had this to say about the refereeing of papers: 'By enlarging the editorial group, so as to dilute the influence of personal prejudice, one inevitably reduces the chances of the unorthodox. Referees are on the whole conservative and the more referees look at the paper the less the journal is likely to take a risk. An independent editor may often have golden dreams that a horse he has backed will come romping home at 45 to 1; but an editorial committee seldom sees its duties in a sporting light.' Those editors with sporting instincts were warned, however, by his next remark: '... my impression is that, in the journal I work for, the worse mistakes of the past four decades have been errors of acceptance rather than rejection.' One of his successors as editor has agreed with this view although he pointed out that mistakes of commission were almost always rapidly exposed while those of omission could remain hidden for a long time. When Fox retired from the editorship he became director of the Family Planning Association. This work strengthened his views on population control and stimulated another vivid lecture, 'Noah's New Flood' (The Lancet 1966;ii:1238), in which he argued that Britain, like any other country, should have a population policy. After he left the FPA in 1967 he seldom wrote again for publication, though he did emerge to reiterate his opinion that industrial action by doctors was a mistake (The Lancet 1976;ii:892). He kept in touch with a mass of friends by letter and by his famous hand-painted Christmas cards. He became a knight in 1962, having declined the honour earlier because he feared his acceptance might be thought to prejudice the independence of the journal. The universities of Glasgow and Birmingham gave him honorary doctorates and he was an honorary fellow of the Royal Australasian College of General Practitioners and the New York Academy of Medicine. In 1962 he was a close contender for presidency of the Royal College of Physicians.

He married Margaret McDougall in 1930 and they had four sons. Robin, their youngest son, became editor of The Lancet in 1990. General Notes: C. W. von BERGEN, M.B., B.S.

Dr. C. W. von Bergen, who practised in Leatherhead, Surrey, for 56 years, and was very well known there, died at his home on November 26 at the age of 83. Carl Wahlgren von Bergen was born at Middleton St. George, Co. Durham, on July 11, 1876, the son of Axel Hugo von Bergen. He was educated at Queen Elizabeth's Grammar School, Darlington, the University of Durham, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. After graduating M.B., B.S. in 1899 he became house-surgeon to Sir Lauder Brunton at Bart's, where he was a contemporary and friend of the late Lord Horder. He was also house-physician for a time at the Victoria Hospital for Children, Chelsea. In 1903 he went into practice at Leatherhead, where he remained for the rest of his life.

"V. B.," as von Bergen was known to many of his friends and patients, never tired of talking of the old days, days when, owning one of the first cars, it was still quicker to go on a bicycle to an urgent call. Perhaps his most outstanding characteristic was a complete integrity and a belief that only the best was good enough. But for his vision and tireless energy it is probable that Leatherhead Hospital would never have been built, and would certainly not have the benefit of a consultant staff drawn from the leading teaching hospitals. Despite the loss of a beloved wife, formerly Mary Barbara Allen, and elder son during the war, he continued to devote tirelessly his energies to his practice, and only partially retired on the advent of the National Health Service. Even after that date his knowledge and experience were always available to the younger men, and in fact he continued as chairman of the medical committee of the Leatherhead Hospital until a year ago. Leatherhead has lost an outstanding personality and the medical profession is the poorer for the loss of a member who upheld all the oldest and best ideals of the family doctor -A. D. E.

8-Prof. Percy Stafford Allen<sup>7</sup> was born on 7 Jul 1869 in 2 Twickenham Park, Twickenham, London, died on 16 Jun 1933 in Oxford, Oxfordshire at age 63, and was buried on 20 Jun 1933 in Corpus Christi chapel, Oxford.

General Notes: Allen, Percy Stafford (1869–1933), Erasmian scholar, was born at 2 Twickenham Park, Twickenham, Middlesex, on 7 July 1869, the younger son and fourth child of Joseph A. Allen (1825–1910), a London bill broker. The Allens were a distinguished and old-established Quaker family, but Joseph Allen had been obliged to leave the Society of Friends on marrying 'out' to Mary Mason (d. 1892), youngest daughter of Hans David Christopher Satow and sister of the Anglican diplomat and historian Sir E. M. Satow. Percy Allen was educated at Clifton College (1882–8) and at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where he was a scholar (1888–92), taking a first class in classical moderations (1890) and a second in literae humaniores (1892).

In 1884 Allen had accompanied his father on a visit to Gibraltar, Morocco, and Malta for the Anti-Slavery Society; in 1893 he travelled with a pupil in Australia and New Zealand. After returning to

In 1884 Allen had accompanied his father on a visit to Gibraltar, Morocco, and Malta for the Anti-Slavery Society; in 1893 he travelled with a pupil in Australia and New Zealand. After returning to Oxford at the end of that year, he won the chancellor's prize for a Latin essay (on the character of Alcibiades) in the summer of 1894. In 1896 he took his MA and became a master at Magdalen College School. Appointed professor of history in the government college at Lahore in 1897, he visited England in the summer of 1898, to marry on 20 September his cousin Helen Mary (1872–1952), daughter of Arthur John and Agneta Allen, of Chislehurst, where Joseph Allen had built himself a house. They had one child, a daughter, who died at birth in 1906.

The climate of India seriously affected the health of both Allen and his wife, and in 1901 he resigned his Lahore professorship and returned to Oxford, where the rest of the Allens' life was spent. Initially they were supported by an annual £250 from Allen's father and by small earnings from minor academic and administrative chores; the death of Joseph Allen in 1910 relieved financial pressure. In 1906 a project to make Allen a research fellow of Corpus Christi failed, but in 1908 he was elected to a fellowship of Merton College, which he held until 1924, becoming an honorary fellow in 1925.

He filled various college offices, notably that of librarian (1915–24), bringing order into the college archives and early holdings, as well as publishing Merton Muniments, a facsimile and edition of some of its earliest documents, with his friend H. W. Garrod in 1928 and having a large part in similar publications by others. The fellowship carried no teaching duties, but for many years Allen continued the lectures he had first given in 1906 on the tradition of the classics. In 1924 he was elected president of Corpus Christi College; he retained this office until his death.

Allen's name will always be associated with his masterly edition of the correspondence of Erasmus, Opus epistolarum Des. Erasmi Roterodami. His interest in Erasmus dated from 1892 when, immediately after taking his first degree, he competed unsuccessfully for the chancellor's English essay prize. The subject was Erasmus. In 1893–4 he attended the lectures on the life and letters of Erasmus by James Anthony Froude, who influenced him profoundly: he always maintained that The Life and Letters (1894) was better than any other book on Erasmus, and on the day on which Froude died he began to read his History of England, which he would never willingly hear disparaged. Allen's first published book was Selections from the Writings of James Anthony Froude (1901). His virtually flawless scholarship and his gentle, impartial temper make his admiration for Froude seem paradoxical. But he was a man incapable of paradox and, on the main issues of the Reformation, he believed Froude to have been right.

During his four years in India, Erasmus's correspondence continuously preoccupied Allen. On 22 June 1901 he and his wife were cutting up earlier printings of the letters to form, along with the extensive collections he had made in the Netherlands and Germany between 1893 and 1896, a basis for a new edition. After the Allens' return to Oxford in 1901 they regularly (the 1914–18 war years excepted) spent spring and summer in European libraries, collating the known material and bringing to light an immense amount of material hitherto unknown. They were aided in 1904 by a small private gift, part of which was spent on a typewriter, and later by modest financial support from the Clarendon Press, which also intervened to allay anxieties about putative rivals. Every letter was copied fair in the library where the manuscript (or the first printed text) was to be found. The copy so made became the 'printer's copy', with no intervening transcript. The proof of each letter was corrected in the library where the original copy had been made. In the decipherment of difficult fifteenth- and sixteenth-century hands Allen had no rival. Nobody knew the texts of the Reformation as well as he; to nobody were the lives of the great and little men of the Reformation so intimately familiar; he knew them and their writings, and anything that anybody else had written about them, at first hand. Ingram Bywater called him 'the most learned man in Oxford' (DNB), and the Opus epistolarum is one of the great monuments of English learning.

The first volume in this first critical edition of Erasmus's correspondence appeared in 1906, and the eighth was published posthumously in 1934, with Allen's portrait for a frontispiece and his life by Garrod, in Latin, by way of introduction. Allen had left it to his wife, his collaborator since the beginning, and to Garrod to complete the last three volumes; for these he had collected the materials, but without furnishing commentary and introductions. Volumes 9–11 appeared between 1938 and 1947; an index compiled by Barbara Flower, completed and edited by Elisabeth Rosenbaum, was published as volume 12 in 1958. Reissued in the 1960s and reprinted entire in 1992, the edition still holds the field unchallenged for accuracy and comprehensiveness. Text apart, 'Allen' is, in its commentary and introductions, 'a treasure-house of unborrowed learning' (DNB), the beginning of a new era in Erasmus scholarship, in which Erasmus is presented, in his own words, fully but sparely and impartially. Moral and historical judgement is left to the reader, who is deemed to share the familiarity of Allen with language, persons, and issues, as well as his affection for Erasmus and his appreciation of Erasmus's situation. The most important single printed source for the intellectual history of western Europe during pre-Reformation and Reformation times, the Opus epistolarum contains more than 3100 letters, 1600 of them by Erasmus himself, as against the 1800 in total printed by Jean Leclerc in 1706. Its texts are based almost entirely on known manuscripts, where Leclerc had often to rely on printed texts. Its datings, on which Erasmus chronology often depends, have stood the test of time remarkably: only a handful of finished letters, with a number of drafts, have since come to light. Its commentary (Leclerc had effectively none), though inevitably now dated, is still indispensable. 'Allen' is the starting point for the correspondence, and for much else, in the edition of the complete works of Erasmus in English issued by Toronto U

Besides the Opus epistolarum, Allen published his prize essay (1894), some single lectures, a little volume of Selections from Erasmus (1908), and eleven lectures in The Age of Erasmus (1914). In 1924 he and his wife published jointly Sir Thomas More: Selections from his English Writings and from the Lives by Erasmus and Roper (presenting a view of More which, like their view of Erasmus, was somewhat sentimental); and in 1929 they edited the Letters of Richard Fox, 1486–1527, the correspondence of the founder of Corpus. In 1934 there appeared posthumously another volume of Erasmian studies by Allen, Erasmus: Lectures and Wayfaring Sketches. One of his services to scholarship was the suggestion to the department of printed books in the British Museum that they should produce a series of short-title catalogues of books published before 1600 in France, Italy, Spain, the Low Countries, and Germany. The first such to be published, of French books, appeared in 1924.

Allen received honorary degrees from the universities of Leiden (1922), Birmingham and Louvain (1927), and Durham (1931); between 1909 and 1930 he became, by invitation, foreign, honorary, or extraordinary member of academies or learned societies in Amsterdam, Antwerp, Ghent, Leiden, and Utrecht; in 1923 he was elected fellow of the British Academy. In 1925 his sense of what was required of the head of a college led him to take his DLitt at Oxford.

Allen was himself an indefatigable letter writer: he wrote easily and copiously, in a minute and precise hand, to family and friends and was prompt in dealing with official correspondence. To Sir Aurel Stein, his closest friend since their meeting at Lahore, he wrote weekly until Stein begged him to write only fortnightly. The selection of letters published in 1939 by Mrs Allen exhibits happily a single-minded scholar of simple tastes, regular habits, personal modesty, care for his friends, and devotion to Erasmus, his works, and his ideals—Allen was a supporter of the League of Nations—a man of moral principle and lovable and saintly character. They give only a superficial impression of his presidency of Corpus Christi, election to which the Allens privately called 'the miracle'. The election process was protracted, and Allen's eventual appointment was controversial among both undergraduates and influential fellows. He was well-meaning and conscientious, but he had neither taste nor aptitude for debate or for university administration. To individual undergraduates he was kind, presenting them all with his edition of the letters written by the founder, Bishop Fox. Yet he and his wife seemed remote and unworldly, entertainments at the lodgings were stiff and for some even painful, and there were embarrassing disciplinary problems. There could be no question, however, that Allen's devotion to the college rested upon a deep knowledge of its origins, and his Times obituarist thought that on scholarly grounds he was 'almost the ideal Head of a House'.

Besides his Latin and Greek, Allen had excellent French and German and could converse in Italian, Spanish, Dutch, and Hindustani. Personally frugal though unobtrusively generous and considerate to others, he defined his recreations as foreign travel and bicycling; both were pursued with a degree of hardiness. In youth he had rowed for his college, and he remained supportive of its boat club. Tall and spare, upright and unhurried but unpompous in carriage as in all things, careful in dress, pale in complexion, he wore his dark hair cut short; like his small moustache it greyed in later life. His eyes were hazel and he habitually wore spectacles.

For thirty years Allen occupied seat S8 in Selden End of the Bodleian Library, of which he was a curator from 1913 and a benefactor; from 1915 to 1924 he was a curator of the Indian Institute. He died in the president's lodgings at Corpus Christi, after a protracted illness, on 16 June 1933. After a funeral service on 20 June he was cremated at Reading; his ashes were buried near the altar in Corpus Christi chapel, which, as an Anglican with doctrinal reservations, he believed should be the centre of college life. The P. S. Allen junior research fellowship in history at Corpus Christi was founded by a bequest from his widow. Her own contribution to their scholarly collaboration was acknowledged by several honours: she received honorary doctorates from the universities of Basel (1946) and Amsterdam (1948) and an honorary MA degree from Oxford (1932), and was elected an honorary fellow of St Hilda's College, Oxford (1944).

He became a partner in the Plough Court Pharmacy established by Silvanus and Timothy Bevan. When Timothy Bevan's son Joseph Gurney Bevan retired, Samuel Mildred took over and the business was styled Mildred & Allen, when William Allen joined the business. Luke Howard joined the business, though the partnership was dissolved in 1806. William became the dominant partner and through his marriage to Charlotte Hanbury, the Hanbury family took a controlling interest. Henceforth, the business was styled Allen & Hanburys.

Founded the Newington Academy for Girls.. in which he was helped by his neighbour, John William Freshfield.

Allen, William (1770–1843), philanthropist and scientist, was born on 29 August 1770 at Stewart Street, the Old Artillery Ground, Spitalfields, London, the eldest of the six sons of Job Allen (1734–1800) and his wife, Margaret Stafford (d. 1830). His father, a silk manufacturer, was a member of the Society of Friends. William Allen grew up, and remained, a committed Friend, and became a leading member of the Gracechurch Street meeting. After going to a Quaker boarding-school at Rochester for a brief period, he was employed in his father's business; but his interest in chemistry led him to enter J. G. Bevan's chemical establishment at Plough Court. On Bevan's retirement in 1795 he took over the business and opened a laboratory at Plaistow. He later formed a partnership with his second wife's two nephews (Messrs Allen and Hanbury). His position enabled him to make many scientific experiments, and he associated with like-minded friends, including the surgeon Astley Paston Cooper, in the Askesian Society. He gave lectures to his fellow members at Plough Court, and became a fellow of the Linnean Society in 1801 and of the Royal Society in 1807. He was appointed lecturer at Guy's Hospital in 1802, and lectured there until 1826. At the request of his friend Humphry Davy he also lectured at the Royal Institution.

Allen's interests, however, moved from science to philanthropy. He had been interested from childhood in the anti-slavery campaign; in 1794 Thomas Clarkson became his friend, and both he and Wilberforce remained close friends throughout Allen's life. On the abolition of the slave trade in 1807, Allen became an active member of the African Institution, and shared in the agitation for the abolition of black slavery in Sierra Leone and the West Indies. He was equally active in promoting education and was a member of the committee formed in 1808 for the support of Joseph Lancaster, the founder of the monitorial school at Borough Road, Southwark, which in 1814 became the British and Foreign School Society. Allen was its treasurer and steady supporter. Under his guidance, the committee paid Lancaster's debts, pruned the monitorial institution at Borough Road of extravagances, set up an enlarged committee to raise subscriptions, warded off the challenge of the Anglican National Society, and, after more extravagances and indiscretions, ousted Lancaster from control of the institution. Allen played a leading part in the production of the British Society's teaching manual and wrote the preface to Scripture Lessons (1820, based on extracts from the Bible), which was for many years the only permitted reading book in British Society schools. The controversy between Lancaster and Andrew Bell, mainly over their respective roles in monitorial education, was one of the topics of The Philanthropist, a quarterly journal which Allen started in 1811 and maintained until 1817, and in which many other social reforms were discussed. James Mill was his chief contributor, and their friendly relations were initially undisturbed by radical religious differences.

In 1814, Allen, with Jeremy Bentham, Robert Owen, and four other partners, bought the New Lanark mills from Owen's previous partners in order to establish a model industrial community. Differences arose over the issue of management; in 1824, Allen—who was alarmed by Owen's avowed atheism—succeeded in enforcing biblical instruction in the New Lanark schools, and in banning the teaching of singing, dancing, and drawing. Owen consequently withdrew from the management and gave up his partnership in 1829, though Allen retained his interest until 1835. Allen was generally admired but Owen considered him narrow-minded and 'a very bustling, meddling character' (Owen, 95, 141), though anxious to do good in his own way. He thought that familiarity with great men had turned the worthy Quaker's head. However unkind this conclusion may seem, it is undeniable that Allen was moving in exalted circles. The duke of Kent was interested in both Owen's and Lancaster's schemes, and served as chairman of the committee appointed to look into Lancaster's muddled affairs. His own financial situation had become embarrassed, and Allen undertook to act as trustee for his estates; the duke consented to live upon a fixed allowance until his debts were discharged. Allen continued to act until the duke's death and the final settlement of his affairs. When the allied sovereigns visited England in 1814, Alexander I of Russia was introduced to Allen as a model Quaker. The tsar attended a Quaker meeting and visited Friends' houses, and evidently regarded Allen with considerable respect and sympathy.

In August 1818 Allen left England on a tour: after travelling through Sweden and Finland to Russia, he visited Alexander at St Petersburg, then moved to Moscow and Odessa. He reached Constantinople in July 1819, and returned by the Greek islands, Italy, and France to England in February 1820. In 1822 he went to Vienna to see Alexander again, chiefly in a vain attempt to obtain a declaration from the powers that the slave trade should be piracy. The tsar and Quaker parted, after several interviews, with prayers and embraces. Allen made other journeys to the continent in 1816, 1832, and 1833, when he examined schools, prisons, and social institutions. In interviews with statesmen and rulers, including the crown prince of Prussia, the king of Bavaria, and the king and queen of Spain, he encouraged them to adopt his ideas for reforms. In Britain he took an interest in many philanthropic causes: he promoted schools and district visiting societies, and gave evidence on the education of the poor to two parliamentary select committees. He also campaigned for the abolition of capital punishment and the protection of the Greeks, corresponding with the duke of Wellington and other political leaders. In 1841 he was appointed president of the Pharmaceutical Society's council. His chief interest in later years was in an 'agricultural colony' with industrial schools, which he helped to found at Lindfield in Sussex, and which he frequently visited to superintend its working.

Allen married, in 1796, Mary Hamilton (b. 1771), who died ten months later; she left a daughter, who in 1822 married Cornelius Hanbury, and herself died in 1823 after the birth of a son. Allen married again in 1806; his second wife was Charlotte Hanbury (b. 1762), who died in 1816. In 1827 he married Grizell Birkbeck, née Hoare (b. 1757), who died in 1835. Allen himself died on 30 December 1843 at Lindfield, and was buried in the Quaker burial-ground, Stoke Newington.

General Notes: She was a Governess and in the mid 1960s was governess to Lady Diana Spencer (later the Princess of Wales), when Diana was a young child at Park House, Sandringham, Norfolk. Rosalind Coward in her biography of the Princess of Wales wrote "Like her older siblings, Diana was initially taught at home by a governess, Gertrude Allen, who had also taught her mother and other local children". Park House one might describe as the Dower house for Sandringham House but was no longer needed by the Royal family. Gertrude was not the only Allen connection between Park House and the Allen family, as, when Francis Allen of Cockley Cley Hall, Norfolk died in 1926, his widow, Dorothy Allen, sold the estate as the house anyway was too large for her needs. Park House was vacant at the time and so, when she applied to the Royal Authorities, they considered her a suitable person so leased it to her. About 5 years later, she was having tea with Lady Fermoy who mentioned they were looking for a house in the area. Dorothy had just got engaged again and said 'what about Park House as she would be leaving on marriage'. The Fermoys did take over the lease. They were maternal Grandparents of the future Princess of Wales and it was through them that the Spencers were in Park House.

9-Peter Myhill Allen<sup>76</sup> was born on 28 Aug 1922 and died on 4 Jan 1983 in Perwez, Belgium at age 60.

General Notes: G'day again Charles

As you can see from the email below, Peter died in 1983 in Perwez. Given Belgian privacy laws, you won't get a death certificate without his son's say so, but an email from the Mayor's secretary is certainly good enough for the family tree.

Steven in London will now file an FOI request so hopefully Peter's SOE PF will be opened some time in the new year.

Thanks again for your help and wishing you all the best

David

- He had a residence about 1850 in Paradise Row, Stoke Newington, London.

Stafford married Hannah Hunton Ransome, 4,22,23,37,57,58,62,70,88 daughter of James Ransome 4,7,62,70,88,90,91 and Hannah Hunton, 4,7,62,70,88,90 on 10 Jan 1839 in FMH Ipswich. Hannah was born on 14 Mar 1813 in Carr Street, Ipswich, died on 6 Jun 1880 in West Drayton, Middlesex at age 67, and was buried in FBG Stoke Newington. They had ten children: Samuel Stafford, Edward Ransome, Mary, Jane, William Clarkson, Hannah Ransome, Edith Mary, Francis, John Archibald, and Alfred Henry.

Stafford Allen, Hannah H, Ransome was the daughter of James and Hannah Ransome of Ipswich, and was born in the Third month of 1813. She was one of a large family who were left motlierless when Hannah was only thirteen years old. From this time, and especially after she left school, her father found in her one of his greatest earthly comforts, and she grew to early womanhood under the care of her mother's sister who took charge of the household and acted a kind part to the motherless children. James Ransome was a man of vigorous and nohle mind, and the love and reverence felt for him by this beloved daughter were unusually strong and often expressed in later years. Hannah was lively and buoyant in disposition, very sensitive, and deeply affectionate, and the bond between father and daughter Avas an uncommon one in many respects. Great desires and earnest longings after heavenly things arose in her heart when about seventeen, and a joint kept at this time shows how often her soul was exercised in self-examination, and how she grieved over the failings of which she felt deeply conscious. Several manuscript volumes of a journal, kept for many years, afford much that is interesting and instructive. At an early age an engagement for marriage Avas formed which circumstances unexpectedly put aside. This was a sore trial, though in after years she often acknowledged how tenderly God had dealt with her at this time; and her sympathy was always very great with any whose experience in this respect had been similar to her own. Referring to this early trial forty- three years later she writes: - " I seemed to see the Lord's hand in it all, and years passed away during which I was drawn nearer to my Almighty Friend; until, to feel that I was cared for by Him, instructed and led by His Spirit, was more to me than any earthly expectation, however bright the prospect." Many interests bound her to the home of her childhood, but after several years, at the age of twenty-five, she received another offer of marriage, which after much prayerful consideration she accepted. She often acknowledged how at this critical time she was guided and directed to choose the path aright, and exhorted others to believe in the power of prayer, and to trust the goodness of our Heavenly Father who directs the steps of those who love Him. - In 1839 H. R. was united in marriage to Stafford Allen, and removed to his home in London. A happy union of forty-one years followed, and together they experienced the joys and trials of family life, for which, as a mother, she was so remarkably fitted. A permanent deafness from which she suffered - the result of a cold - was not the least of these trials; but this was borne by her with the greatest patience and cheerfulness, and she sometimes alluded to it as "the crook in her lot; part of a needed discipline, which was desirable for her, or it would not have been permitted." The loss, by death, of two dear little girls, one a year and eight months, the other eight years old, was much felt by her loving heart, but she bowed in submission to her Father's will, and was able to say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Early in her married life she writes of much comfort received from a sermon preached by Dr. Thomas, of America, in which he pointed out that the soul must "make surrender to the con-victions of the Holy Spirit," a term which, she writes, brought help to her soul, and was ofter used by her afterwards in explaining to the young the way of salvation. Dr. Thomas also dwelt upon the necessity of this new birth as a persona spiritual experience; and from about this time H. S. Allen felt a joyful, yet humble assurance of her soul's salvation, though the infirmities of the flesh were often cause of great heart sorrow to her. As years passed on, her Christian character deepened, and she became the centre of a circle by whom she was both loved and revered. She sometimes expressed a wish that she had known in earlier days more teaching upon the needs of the soul, and more openness in speaking of spiritual things, saying, "We live now in a day when there are many who love to speak of Jesus, and while we must be cautious we do not err on the opposite side, and speak words without corresponding experience, or lightly mention sacred subjects, I believe those who 'fear the Lord' may often speak upon His name with profit now', as in former times." Many and earnest were her wrestlings in prayer for her dear ones, often at night leaving her bed to plead for some absent one who was un-conscious of her deep exercise of soul at the time, but who learnt the value of a mothers prayers by the realisation of her petitions in after days. Some particularly pointed and immediate answers to prayer have been recorded by her with heartfelt gratitude, and strong was her faith and firm her belief in the definite guidance of the Holy Spirit. An entry in her diary, dated Fifth month 8th, 1878, is as follows: - " A true and unexpected answer to prayer, a gift assisting me greatly in my labour of love for G.' Third month 10th, 1878, she writes-" Under circumstances of difficulty and perplexity I have found the Lord an all-sufficient helper, and He has delivered and sustained me through great conflicts, and has provided for me beyond what I could ask or think, bearing my burden wdienever I have truly trusted in Him " " I have never been permitted to feel it nearly the help to confer with flesh and blood that it has been to go boldly to the throne of grace; and I have never done this without experiencing guidance and receiving help sufficient for my utmost needs. "I find it good and helpful to cast my care upon God, and in all my ways I desire to acknowledge Him. Again and again has the Lord performed all things for me, and I desire to bear my humble testimony to the loving-kindness of my Father in Heaven. Is not the true experience of the trusting Cliristian, "Before they call 1 will answer and while they are yet speaking I will hear'?" After sharing for many years with a beloved partner the cares and anxieties incident to the bringing up of a large family, a season of peace and happiness was granted her in their quiet home at Clapton, where for a while she greatly enjoyed the service of the Church, "ministering to the saints," sympathising with all who needed sympathy, cheering the fainthearted, bearing the burdens af many, and truly thus fulfilling the law of Christ. Many sweet friendships date from this time, and all who came within that home circle she frecjuently remembered at the throne of grace with tender affection. Her heart specially warmed towards all who felt themselves called to the ministry of the Gospel, and not least towards those who felt themselves amongst the "little ones," to whom she was truly a mother in Israel; and all who were engaged in the service of our Divine Master were sure of her encouragement and help. The Brumana Mission in Syria was specially dear to her heart, and all connected with the work there "shared her deepest affection and interest. In the family circle she often bent the knee in prayer, and many sweet seasons on the Sabbath afternoon are now among memories of the past. Sometimes when about to part with one and another, the tears of earnest love Avould stream down her cheeks, her feelings seeming too deep for utterance. Her desires for the spiritual welfare of her children pressed upon her far more than concern for their temporal needs, though she was in every sense a true mother. She often said in later times, "I have never felt it needful to pray nmch for you as regards your prospects for this ivorld, for we have the promise, All things needful will be provided; but I feel sometimes as if I cannot rest till my children, from the eldest to the youngest, have learnt to know their Saviour, and I believe I could be content to go when I know this to be the case." In the early autumn of 1876 symptoms of a decline of health from over-taxed powers became apparent; the occasional faintness caused by weak action of the heart, from which she had suffered for years, became more frequent and alarming, and after some months disease developed which necessitated her retirement from active life. When told of the serious nature of her complaint she seemed but little affected, remarking, with a smile, "My warningbell has rung." Severe suffering and restless nights were her portion a few months later, but were borne with the greatest patience, and after a time she was once more restored to some measure of health, to the great joy of her family and friends, who believe that this was granted in answer to earnest prayer. She continued in a precarious state of health for more than two years, occasionally being able to attend meeting once in the day. This was a privilege which she highly valued; and she de-sired that all might share in it. An entry in her diary, dated 19th of Tenth month, 1878, is as follows: - "At Sudbury very precious meeting. My feeling given was - In the presence of the King; in the audience-chamber of the King of Kings." It was on very rare occasions that her voice broke the silence of our meetings, but when this was the case her words were few, but expressed with deep feeling. She would say sometimes to her intimate friends, "public ministry is not my calling; mine is a hidden service." And so it was in measure, for she was truly faithful in the little, and conscientious in fulfilling everything which she felt laid upon her as a duty. Though, of necessity, her life was at this time somewhat retired, and her days were often passed entirely up-stairs, she still felt that she had little services for her Lord, and many a message and letter sent from her quiet chamber cheered the heart of a sorrowful one, and bore testimony that she was, as she expressed it, " on the watch- tower," upholding the hands of more active servants by her earnest prayers. Seventh month, 1878, she writes:-" Much oppressed by my breathing. My own belief is, this is progress in the complaint of the heart. I thank my God that He helps me to look at this calmly. Jesus is very precious to me; I feel safe with Him." The winter of 1879-80 passed without causing fresh anxiety; but her friends felt that there was no ground gained. In the first week of the Yearly Meeting of 1880 she saw a few of her dear friends, but a proposed visit to her eldest daughter and son-in-law, at West Drayton, being her own suggestion for the latter week, she was removed thither with tolerable ease, though she walked from the carriage to the house with some difficulty. A quiet and very happy fortnight passed away, in which in thought of coming separation clouded the bright present. Daily drives seemed to refresh and strengthen her. Her countenance wore a bright and healthful appearance, and the serenity of her spirit showed the sweetly-prepared state of her waiting soul. More than once she said, "I am so happy here. This rest and quiet are doing me so much good. If my call comes while with you, I could go as readily as from dear Parkfield." It was noticed that she said this on three occasions. An atmo- sphere of holy calm seemed to surround her, and all felt its influence. The hour by which she thought to return home was fixed, her luggage was all packed and sent forward, when suddenly came the Master's call, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!" On the afternoon of Sixth day, the 4th of Sixth month, she was rising from bed after her usual rest before tea, when she seemed faint and desired again to lie down. She then lay for some wdiile as if dozing; but irregular breathing coming on, her children were alarmed, and summoned the family doctor, who expressed his opinion that the symptoms were very serious. A night of sorrowful watching and waiting followed, and morning brought no improvement. Absent dear relatives were summoned, and it soon became apparent that the end was near. Her eyes were closed, and she appeared as if sleeping. She never rallied to full consciousness, and just forty-eight hours from the time of the seizure, with husband and children around her, she peacefully passed away. May we not rejoice for her in the full belief that she has received an abundant entrance into that Heaven whither the Forerunner is for us entered; and that, clothed in His righteousness, she has been presented faultless before the Throne of God?

- 7-Edward Ransome Allen<sup>58,88,92</sup> was born on 17 Nov 1841 in 7 Cowper Street, Finsbury, London and died on 6 Dec 1916 in Stoke Newington, London at age 75.

General Notes: Edward Ransome Allen 75 G 12 1910 Stoke Newington. An Elder. Edward Ransome Allen bore two names honoured in the annals of the Society, but known far beyond its limits, and he bore them worthily. His great-grandfather, Job Allen, baptised 1734, silk-weaver of Steward Street, Spitalflelds, joined the Society, and married Margaret Stafford, whose grandfather, Walter Stafford, joined at a much earlier date. On his mother's side he was descended from Richard and Phoebe Ransom, of North Walsham, Norfolk, of whom, Richard was "convinced of truth" about 1676, and for some fifteen years suffered imprisonment for conscience' sake. From this worthy couple are descended the Ransoms of Hitchin, the elder branch, and the Ransomes of Ipswich. Edward R. Allen was born in 1841, at 7 Cowper Street, Finsbury, a house adjoining his father's business premises, being the second son of Stafford and Hannah Hunter Allen, better known amongst Friends as Hannah Stafford Allen. To the early training of such parentage as theirs he owed much that contributed to his useful career as citizen and Friend. The family moved from Cowper Street to Charles Square in 1845, and to Stoke Newington four or five years later, being amongst the pioneers in that great wave of migration from the business portions of the city of London which continued with ever increasing volume during the later decades of the nineteenth century. From infancy, therefore, E. R. Allen has been associated with London and Middlesex Quarterly Meeting, and, with the exception of a few years spent in schooldays at Folkestone and Bootham, and as an apprentice at Ipswich, has resided within the "compass' of Devonshire House Monthly Meeting. On his 23rd anniversary he was married to Ellen, second daughter of John Dawson and Ann Watlock, of Wandsworth, who survives him; they celebrated their Golden Wedding in 1914. All his life after his Ipswich apprenticeship, over fifty -five and a half years, he was associated with the business of Stafford Allen & Sons, of Cowper Street, drug grinders, now Stafford Allen & Sons, Ltd., manufacturing chemists, of which Company he was Chairman at the time of his decease, actively participating in its interests, it may be said of him that he was "not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Nevertheless he was no recluse, not allowing neither his business cares or his inner life to deter him from rational enjoyment of other pursuits and recreations. He was keen in his enjoyment of nature, and found to a large extent in his own country the fascination which "many seek beyond seas. Both rod and gun had their attraction, and he was a cyclist from the early days of the "boneshaker" until recent years, when a modern "free-wheel" proved useful in the visitation of Meetings. His work for the Society extended over a long period, during which he gave valuable help to his Monthly and Quarterly Meetings, acting as Clerk of the latter for several years. In the engagements of Committees of these Meetings, for which he very frequently acted as clerk, as also in the administration of their Trusts and Trust Property, he took a very active share, one might say up to the last, being in consultation about some of them within two or three days of his decease. To all these, and to the consideration of the affairs of the Church, he brought a valuable business experience combined with a wise and cautious conservatism in days in which events move with a rapidity unknown to our forefathers. As an Overseer of many years' standing, he entered sympathetically into matters requiring judgment and delicate handling; qualifications invaluable in the discharge of the duties of Elder or Overseer. As an Elder of much experience his judgment was weighty, and he was fully conscious of the responsibility of the office. Thus has one more of the roll of good and honest men passed to his rest, leaving behind him the memory of a well-spent life. The Friend.

General Notes: The late journalist, Jeffrey Bernard, writing in The Spectator of the 14th June 1985, had this to say of "Corky" Latimer.

But after Derby Day you may imagine my shock, horror and the pallor of my tight-lipped face when I read that letter in last week's Spectator from Corky Latimer ticking me off for having written that our old school, the Nautical College Pangbourne, was 'awful' or 'ghastly'. Well, it was for me. Corky was, I believe, a cadet captain as opposed to a mere cadet so he had some privileges and he had the advantage of having a brain. With no rank and no brain until I was 16 everywhere but everywhere was awful and ghastly, and I include home. And Corky writing that four of our contemporaries are now admirals completely boggles my mind. I shudder to think that they might be any of the four boys who used to smoke cigarettes with me in the woods on Saturday afternoons and who had masturbation races in the dormitories. This could be very bad for a company like Cunard if it gets out. But we have survived, I suppose. That nutcase Ken Russell went to Pangbourne as did Beverley Cross the writer, who caned me once for reading a novel during prep. I remember it was Somerset Maugham. But my fondest memory of Pangbourne was getting 12 cuts for uttering a four-letter word beginning with F and it wasn't 'food'. It still makes me twitch to think about it. Sociologists will be surprised to know that it didn't do me any good. In fact it was probably that experience which makes me so rude to editors and policemen of all sorts. But, dear Corky, you shouldn't have implied that readers are not allowed to complain about me. They do all the time and make yourself at home in this respect at any time you like.

The Old Pangbournian Society in an obituary, were somewhat more circumspect.

"Courtenay Latimer (43-47) died suddenly on 12 September, 2011, aged 78.

Known as Corky, he enjoyed his time at the NCP and left Pangbourne to do his national service in the Army, writes Lionel Stephens. Commissioned into the Royal Army Service Corps, Courtenay hoped that his love of boats and his nautical background would enable him to join Water Transport. Instead he was sent to Berlin where he was put in charge of the Havel Water Base during the vital Berlin Airlift of 1948-49. Late in life he published a detailed account of this episode in a book facetiously titled "My Struggle with Joseph Stalin."

After national service Courtenay became a yacht broker working in the City of London and later from his home in Woodbridge. In 1959 he sailed to New Zealand with a dozen others in the 70ft Aberdeen Anzac motor fishing vessel. Years later, in 2004, he wrote an account of this unusual voyage in a memoir titled "Creeping Up On Auckland."

Courtenay had a fantastic memory for detail and was great company. He loved keeping in touch with events at the College and attended the OP Reunion lunch in Lavenham in 2007.

- He was educated at Nautical College Pangbourne in Pangbourne, Berkshire.
- He worked as an officer of the Royal Army Service Corps.

- He worked as an officer in charge Lake Havel seaplane base in 1948-1949 in Berlin, Germany.

After her husband's death in 1946, Joan Williams went back to her family home in Suffolk to care for her mother. She returned to Leesburg when her mother died, and worked at Loudoun Hospital caring for premature babies. She was also active in other community activities, continuing her interest in Thomas Balch Library and in Oatlands Plantation, where she served as a docent for 24 years. Joan Williams died 27 September 2003."

Taken from the "Williams Family Papers 1819 - 1993" at the Thomas Balch Library, 208 West Market Street, Leesburg, VA 20176

Joan Williams came to town, made it her own. Many times people come into our lives and leave their mark. But it is not often that someone moves into a county and becomes a predominate part of its history. Joan Stafford Allen Williams was one of these people. Not only did she touch the lives of people with her good works and generosity, but she left her mark on Loudoun County's history by telling the story of Oatlands Plantation. On Sept. 27, Mrs. Williams, 96, retired nurse and a docent for the National Trust at Oatlands, died in her home in Leesburg of an aortic aneurysm. "Mrs. Williams was like a page in Oatlands history," said Oatlands Director of Education Belinda Thomas. "She was part of the house, part of the history of strong women at Oatlands, and she taught us that history can be entertaining." Through her lively ways and strong personality, Mrs. Williams became an attraction at Oatlands. People would come from across the country to tour Oatlands with her as their guide, and she received fan mail from those who had already experienced her grandeur. Not only did Mrs. Williams touch tourists' hearts, she touched the hearts of everyone who came in contact with her, especially her family.

She was an inspiration to her friends and a legend to the children and grandchildren," said Anthony Yelloly, a nephew who resides in England. "She had a clear vision of what was right and what was wrong," said stepgrandson Win Williams. "She instilled her beliefs without being pompous." Mrs. Williams was born April 3, 1907, in Long Melford, Suffolk, England. In 1937 she took a trip to Washington, D.C., and while on the boat she met Harrison Williams, a farmer, lawyer and author in Loudoun County. A year later the two were married in the chapel of the National Cathedral. Transplanting herself into her new life, Mrs. Williams threw herself into many activities. She became a member of the Goose Creek Friends Meeting in Lincoln, the Leesburg Garden Club, the Leesburg Book Club and the 24 Club. She was widely known for her work as a night nurse in the neonatal ward of the old Loudoun Memorial Hospital on Cornwall Street in Leesburg during the 1960s. She would knit hats for the newborns and come in on her days off to care for children, said Walter Devine, who grew up in Leesburg. "I was born premature at 6 1/2 months," said Devine. "Incubators had just come in, and I had to be fed four times a day through a feeding tube. It was very dangerous because if the tube and food got into the lungs, the baby would die. "Mrs. Williams, or 'Wims' as I called her, was the only one who would feed me, so she even came in on her days off to feed me," he added. When the hospital moved to its present location at Lansdowne, Mrs. Williams stayed downtown and worked at the long-term care facility. She worked there until February of this year, only leaving after a minor stroke. "My grandmother always used to say, 'The problem with people today is they need a granny, someone to go to for advice'," said stepgranddaughter Constance de Bordenave. "She was a great listener. Sometimes her silence was heard more than her spoken voice." Up until the day she passed away, people were still going to visit and learn from her. "Whenever you were with her," said Devine, "you always left feeling better about yourself."

Joan married Harrison Williams, son of Griffin Stedman Williams and Mary Pearce Harrison, on 17 Aug 1938 in National Cathedral, Washington DC, USA. Harrison was born on 28 Feb 1873 and died on 9 Jun 1946 in Buffalo, Erie County, New York, USA at age 73.

General Notes: Basic notes: He was educated at University School in Nottingham, and from 1890-1891 he attended Chateau de Lancy School near Geneva, Switzerland. His family returned to Buffalo USA in 1891. He attended law school at University of Buffalo, graduating in 1893, and was admitted to the bar the following year. He was a Lawyer, Farmer and Author. He was married twice before marrying Joan but both wives died. Harrison enjoyed traveling, and made a number of trips abroad. Harrison Williams met Joan Stafford Allen (1907-2003) during a transatlantic voyage from England in 1937. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Stafford Allen (n.d.) of Long Melford, Suffolk, England. The two became friends during the journey, and Williams invited her to visit Roxbury Hall when they arrived in the US. After she returned to England they continued to correspond. He surprised her with a visit to her home, where he proposed, in 1938. They were married on 17 August 1938 in the National Cathedral in Washington, DC. After they returned from a two-week wedding trip the couple settled in the new home Williams built on West Market St. in Leesburg next to Thomas Balch Library. The Williams both were involved with Thomas Balch Library, and Harrison Williams served as president of the library from 1925 until his death.

8-Douglas Allen<sup>6,26,43,86,121,122</sup> was born on 16 May 1873 in London or Long Melford area and died on 20 Jun 1949 in Ramleh, Alexandria, Egypt at age 76.

General Notes: Douglas Allen (1888-90) has responded gallantly to the call with two letters. The following extracts have been selected so as to avoid duplicating news which appears in them both. " I am astounded to look back and think it's nearly fifty years since I left the old School, and yet I'm full of go, and the old brain, though a bit soft at times, still functions. " We've had a very hot and damp summer here, with plenty to do as we had the British Fleet here for months-we made friends with lots of the personnel, officers and men--and a fine lot they are too. " Winter is now with us, cold and quite a lot of rain-I smile when I see the adverts ' Come to sunny Egypt'-it may be sunny at times, but it can be extremely cold after a hot clammy summer, and we do enjoy a fire in our sitting-room. " Out of business hours I am fairly well occupied with Y.M.C.A. here (an international affair and very interesting), Toc H among our own people, and also I am on the Scout executive. I do not do any strenuous work with the boys now, though I was one of the founders of the movement here in 1912, and the dear old Chief Scout gave me the Medal of Merit for my labours! However, it's better to do something than to sit by and grin. " One wonders what Egypt will be like in a few years' time now that Britain has withdrawn her hand from the plough! As an old resident here I can see wobbly furrows from now on. It's all very well to talk about self-determination of smaller nations, but let 'em learn to walk before they run." Allen finishes up by sending warm greetings to Old Scholars in the West of Scotland, where last year he was on a motor tour with his wife. Bootham magazine - April 1937

Douglas Allen (1888-90) received an M.B.E. in the King's Birthday Honours, in recognition of his social activities in Scouting, Toc H, and Y.M.C.A. work in Alexandria, in which he has been engaged for the past thirty years. He and a Church of England Chaplain started the Scout movement in Egypt in 1912. Bootham magazine - December 1939

DOUGLAS ALLEN Douglas Allen, who passed peacefully away in Egypt on June 20th, aged 76, was the youngest son of Edward Ransome and Ellen (nee Watlock) Allen. He was educated at Paradise House, Stoke Newington, and afterwards at Bootham, 1889-90. On leaving school he was for a short period with the family firm of Stafford Allen & Sons, spending the greater part of the time on its farm at Ampthill, Bedfordshire, where plants were grown in connection with the business. It was then that I first came to know Douglas Allen and a close friendship resulted. To my personal sorrow, in 1898 he accepted a position in Alexandria with the firm Allen, Alderson & Co. Since then he resided in or near Alexandria for the rest of his life, with periodic visits to England. In 1901 he married Margaret Louise Fry, of Ipswich, and they enjoyed a life of unbroken happiness. Douglas Allen was a man of high integrity and in every sense a true English gentleman. He took an active part in the social life of the community in which he lived, and was always glad to help in any good cause. Among other activities he started the local Boy Scout movement in 1912, and in 1939 he was awarded the M.B.E. He had a warm personality and a strong sense of humour, and will long be remembered by those among whom he lived. This was evidenced by the fact that nearly 300 people attended his funeral, representing at least 12 different nationalities. P. W. BROWN. Bootham magazine - June 1949

General Notes: Jane Bastin, 59 1 10mo. 1904 Rowlands Castle. Wife of E. Philp Bastin. Jane Bastin was the daughter of the late Stafford and Hannah Allen (nee Ransome), and was born at Hoxton, London, in 1845, before her parents' removal to Stoke Newington, with which meeting they were so long intimately associated. She was the eldest surviving daughter of a family of ten children, and her early life at home was a very busy and happy one. Like some others who have had careful religious home training, Jane Allen probably could not remember a time when she did not love and trust her Saviour. Hers was an active and energetic temperament, and at school she took real pleasure in her lessons, which she never felt to be burdensome. Her bright, cheerful disposition made her a favourite with her schoolfellows, with some of whom she maintained an intimate friendship during all her life. After leaving school, her mother's deafness made her part in the family life at Paradise Row, and afterwards at Church Street, Stoke Newington, both active and responsible. Her parents warmly welcomed the visits of friends travelling in the ministry, and a number of these from America as well as from various parts of our own country, were welcome guests of Stafford and Haimah Allen, and these came under her loving care. During these years of home highest took an active interest in her own Meeting, and was a willing helper in working meetings and other useful service, such as visiting the aged and infirm, on behalf of her dear mother, whose thoughts often went out in sympathy and love towards those who were in trouble or sorrow. She was one of the early workers at the Bedford Institute, to which she went on First-day mornings and sometimes during the week for some years. The interest which she took in her class of girls was warmly reciprocated, and was maintained, in some instances long after she had ceased to be a teacher. Her marriage to E. Philp Bastin took place at Stoke Newington, August 12th, 1869. The first few years of married life were spent at Victoria Grove near her own and her husband's parents, and within easy reach of meeting, and of a large circle of friends. After the birth of their first child. Jane Bastin passed through a long and severe illness, from which she was mercifully restored to her dear ones. Another child was born in 1872, and shortly afterwards the family removed to Uxbridge, in which tow'l and in the neighbouring village of West Drayton, many happy and eventful years were passed, as well as some anxious and sorrowful times. J. Bastin took much interest in the annual gatherings of Friends at Jordans Meeting-House, and enjoyed welcoming and entertaining them on their way to this lovely Buckinghamshire retreat. Many happy times of social intercourse were thus spent, which she greatly appreciated, and the meetings at Jordans were often times of true spiritual refreshment. It was soon after the annual gathering there in 1880, that her beloved mother, whilst on a visit at West Drayton, was called away to her heavenly home. During these years a meeting was held on Sunday evenings in a cottage at West Drayton in the endeavour to influence for good those who attended no other place of worship. Jane Bastin was seldom absent, whatever the weather, from the little gathering, which there is reason to believe was made a means of blessing to some. A weekly Bible reading was also held in her home, to which the neighbours were invited, and this was often felt to be a time of renewal of spiritial strength. Earlir in 1886, several of her children were prostrated by typhoid fever, and a protracted peiiod of anxiety followed. They were all mercifully restored to health except Allie, the eldest son, whose life so full of promise was thus cut short in his sixteenth year. The blow was a lieavy one indeed, and all that kind relatives and friends could think of was done to comfort the stricken hearts of the parents, but it was thought best not to return to West Drayton, and so a house was taken at Hammersmith. Later on they resided at Kingston-on-Thames for about ten years, and it -was during this period, perhaps more than at any other that she was able, being now freed from the cares of a yoing family, to enter fully into the social and religious life of the Meeting to which she belonged. On January 9th, 1899, she wrote: - "I have said many times, I have surrendered all that I have and am to my Lord; but during this past month, a fuller, deeper spiritual joy has come into my heart, and I know what I have longed to know, that this is a real accomplished fact, a definite covenant with my God, and the hymn commencing 'Thou sweet beloved will of God' is the language of my heart to-day." Shortly after settling at Kingston she commenced a 'Mothers' IMeeting; many of the attenders were the objects of her love and sym- pathy, and some of the friendships thus formed were only terminated by her death. Later on this 'Mothers' Meeting was merged in the Women's Adult School, which has become a flourishing and efficient organisation. The garden at her home, "Trevose," was an unfailing source of pleasure to her, and many Mere the summer gatherings to which she welcomed personal friends, and those in whom she was interested, for happy hours of social and religious enjoyment. She writes: - "Such a blessed promise is mine this week, Isaiah Iviii. verses 8 to 11; what a beautiful picture during these cool evenings which have followed so many sultry ones! how I have revelled in the sweetness and fragrance of my watered garden, ferns, roses and lilies bending their heads in joyful refreshment. The sweet patter of rain upon leaves outside conies as music. Oh the sweet refreshing of the heavenly dew." On two or three occasions she invited the young women from the Aerated Bread Company's establishment near Devonshire House, to spend an afternoon in a ramble on the banks of the Thames and amongst the attractions of Hampton Court Palace and grounds, with a pleasant, social and religious opportunity at Trevose before their return to London. She thus sought to show her appreciation of their efforts for the comfort of Friends during Yearly fleeting. She wrote: - ' It is joy beyond words to me to know that we are heirs together of the grace of life, and that our beloved children are under His own preparing hand for their work in His harvest field." The last three years of her life, 1901-1904, were spent at her new home "Trewetha" in the quiet village of Rowlands Castle, Hampshire, away from the noise and bustle of town life and amidst pleasant rural surroundings. Although she appeared to be enjoying fairly good health, and the more bracing atmosphere seemed to suit her, she did not feel able to take up much in the way of active work. Drawing room Bible readings were however held occasionally, and a quarterly tea meeting for the wives of the workmen in the Village Institute. She was also much interested in the village children and enjoyed having them iip to play in her garden. The training of girls for domestic service was a subject about which she thought a good deal, and she endeavoured to do what she could in this direction. Her loving sympathy was always extended towards the sad and suffering. Mothers with large families to provide for on slender incomes, were sure of her ready and patient attention, and of receiving the best help and advice which she could give. During the spring of 1903 and thenceforward, J. Bastin was consciovis of a steady but very gradual decrease of strength, evidenced principally by her shortened walks and by her avoiding the hills. She left home very seldom after this time, and attendance at Monthly and Quarterly Meetings, the holding of the Bible readings, and other gatherings of adults and children in the house and garden, which she had much enjoyed, had to be curtailed and subsequently given up altogether. But it was not until the early part of August, 1904, that serious alarm was felt, and she took to her bed on the 4th of the following month. From this time until the end she calmly and patiently bore the increasing weakness and weariness which nothing could remove, but which the loving care of those about her did the utmost possible to alleviate. She was still able at times to enjoy hearing portions of her favourite psalms and hymns, and she realised the presence of her Saviour, and that imderneath were the everlasting arms. All her children w

Sweet as the tender fragrance that survives,

When martyred flowers breathe out their little lives;

Sweet as a song that once consoled our pain,

But never will be sung to us again,

Is thy remembrance. Now the hour of rest

Hath come to thee '97sleep, darling, it is best.

General Notes: CHUNGKING, CHINA. WILFRID A. MAW (1888-91), tells us of a tiger that recently made its appearance in his neighbourhood and killed four men and a girl. A curious fact in connection with the incident was that no native would give information to the British Consul as to the whereabouts of the beast as their priests had convinced them that it was a god! Wilfrid Maw goes on to tell us that "there is a local daily paper published by a Jap whose chief object is to set the Chinese against all foreigners (especially English) except Japanese. The latest sensation which set all Chungking and this half of the province in a ferment was the announcement of the English occupation of the Yangtse Valley and that a huge British force was coming up the river from Ichang with no end of warships. We were fortunate to escape a serious riot, as the report had reached us that all the Church members, a few hundreds, would be spared, but the rest of the population, 300,000 or so, wiped out! "Wilfrid Maw is acting as treasurer of the mission, an occupation that, as those who remember him at Bootham will know, must suit his mathematical abilities well, more especially as he has some six or seven different native currencies to take into account! But besides this he has charge of the boys' primary school, takes both English and Latin classes, hunts butterflies, and has studied sufficiently to enable him to pass three half-yearly examinations in the past year! Truly the life of a missionary is none too easy a one, and who shall say that the Alma Mater is not honoured indeed by those of her sons that undertake it?

General Notes: A long and interesting letter from G. W. MAW (1899-1902) from Nagpur must be heavily scissored, in the manner of film production. He writes: "I have been sending home lots of newspaper cuttings giving long descriptions of the M.C.C. tour to my boys. Hugh, the youngest, hoped that I would ask C. K. Naidu to get the autographs of all the M.C.C. players. I am afraid I found the request rather embarrassing. I met C. K. Naidu rather more than a year ago, as he is an old student of Hislop College, and he was the lion of the season just about the time the College held its Annual Social Gathering, soon after Naidu's return from England. . . . " I have now been living for over six months in my third place of residence since returning to Nagpur fourteen months ago. To start of f with I shared a bungalow with one of the Church of Scotland missionaries, and then moved back to the bungalow on the Friends' Hostel compound. . . . The bungalow is an enormous barn of a place, built in the old spacious days when things were cheap and labour cost almost nothing. It is uncomfortably large according to modern missionary ideas, and there are not many missionaries nowadays who would not gladly exchange for something smaller and easier to manage, and not so far away from the people in more senses than one. I lived there through the hot weather, as that was the place provided for me by the Scottish Mission. But during the hot weather, in a very remarkable way, details of which I have no time to tell, I was led to the small house in the city which I now occupy. If you were to see a photograph of the house without any means of judging its scale you might think that I had gone into a still more palatial residence, as the house is a two-storey building, with a space under the roof that can be used as a storage place for lumber. But the rooms are really so low that neither up nor down stairs is there very much clearance for my head. In fact, in my office, which is the only room downstairs (not counting the front veranda), which by means of bamboo curtains I turn into a sitting-room if I have visitors, I can actually touch one of the beams with my head when I am standing under it. I am over 6 ft. when I have shoes on, but my highest door is 5 ft. 6 in., while the lowest is just half an inch less than 4 ft., and that is a door that I go through quite frequently.... The house is situated within twenty yards of a main street, on the other side of which is the big Government Hospital.... My immediate neighbours are blacksmiths, washermen, fishermen, and poUce. . . . " But in spite of it all .. . I have had a very happy six months here. I am on very good terms with all my neighbours. The next-door children, several of whom have not yet reached the stage when clothes are considered necessary for either sex, come wandering freely in and out of my house at almost any time of the day. In fact, almost every day, when I am doing something which I really must concentrate on, I have to put the chain on the courtyard door to keep them out. But they are a jolly, lively little crowd, and I can forgive them a lot, even when they come and pull up some of the most precious things in my garden, which has been a great joy to them." 7-Francis Allen<sup>74,88</sup> was born on 9 May 1852 in Church Street, Stoke Newington, London, died in 1927 in Cockley Cley Hall, Swaffham, Norfolk at age 75, and was buried in Swaffham, Norfolk.

General Notes: He was educated at Bootham School from 1863 to 1868 in York. He worked as an Engineer. In 1870 his eldest brother, Samuel Stafford, died from consumption in Egypt. Later that same year he and his father, Stafford, went out to Egypt to inspect the company 'Allen, Alderson & Co.' in Alexandria, Egypt. They had their English office in 7 Cowper Street, London (where 'Stafford Allen & Sons' operated from). It was agreed that Francis should take over the role of his late brother. Francis then specialised in the heavy engineering business such as dredging and irrigation equipment and narrow gauge railway trains for use in the Nile Delta cotton fields and built up the business to be "among the most prosperous in Alexandria". He started several subsidiary companies and also bought from the Egyptian Government the Khedivial Mail Line, which was one of the main shipping lines out of Egypt, including bonded warehouses, workshops, etc. The shipping company was later was taken over by P. & O. Line. Francis was also interested in Egyptian archaeology and at least once financially helped Howard Carter, who discovered the Tomb of Tutankhamen. He was appointed one of the 3 Deputy Lieutenants for Norfolk for 1926 (see London Gazette of 17.Nov. 1925) but later sadly had to stand down when he became seriously ill and later died. Recreation:- He loved shooting, which, as well as being a suitable house for his family, is why he bought the Cockley Cley estate, and fishing, especially when he was shooting there with his two younger brothers - John Archibald Allen and Alfred Henry Allen.

Noted events in his life were:

- He was educated at Bootham School in 1863-1868 in York, Yorkshire.
- He worked as an Engineer. Allen, Alderson & Co. In Ramleh, Alexandria, Egypt.
- He had a residence in Cockley Cley Hall, Swaffham, Norfolk.

Francis married Charlotte Jane Dickson,<sup>6</sup> daughter of Spencer Naylor Dickson and Eliza Martha Boardman, on 29 Oct 1879 in Chiswick, London. Charlotte was born on 15 Apr 1852 in 10 Nottingham Place, Marylebone, London and died on 23 Feb 1912 in Cockley Cley Hall, Swaffham, Norfolk at age 59. Gwendolen married Dr. Walter Rutherford Black<sup>6</sup> in 1942. Walter was born on 29 Dec 1911 in Galashiels, Selkirkshire and died in 1986 at age 75. They had two children: John Duncan and Elizabeth Anne.

General Notes: W R BLACK MB, CHB, FRCSED Mr W R Black, formerly senior consultant surgeon at Weston-super-Mare General Hospital, has died aged 73. Walter Rutherford Black was born on 29 December 1911 at Galashiels and was educated at George Watson's College, Edinburgh, and the University of Edinburgh, where he graduated in medicine in 1934. In addition to being a keen fisherman he also enjoyed rugby football, playing as a forward. After junior appointments and a period of study in Brussels he was appointed surgical registrar at Nottingham General Hospital. While there he met his future wife, Gwendolen, who was a house physician at the hospital. After leaving Nottingham he took the post of clinical tutor in the surgical out patient department at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh, where he developed his flair for teaching. Although he volunteered to join the Royal Air Force, Walter was rejected because of a previous mastoidectomy. He joined the Royal Army Medical Corps and married Gwen in 1942. After only a weekend together he was posted abroad and served in Africa, India, and Burma, in 1945 becoming medical officer in charge of the Military Hospital, Poona, with the rank of acting lieutenant colonel. He subsequently became senior medical officer in the Isle of Wight and a surgical specialist at Aldershot Hospital. On his return to civilian life Walter was appointed senior surgical registrar at Bristol Royal Infirmary, where his teaching ability, high principles, and integrity endeared him to his clinical students. On his appointment, in 1950, as senior consultant surgeon at Weston-super-Mare General Hospital teaching continued to be one ofhis special interests. He became the organiser of postgraduate tuition in the South West region and was senior surgical tutor in the faculty of medicine of the University of Bristol. He was a member of the Grey Turner and Milnes-Walker travelling surgical clubs and of various committees in the NHS; he was also chairman of the Weston-super-Mare and district Cancer Research Campaign for 28 years. Walter chose to retire in 1972, at the age of 60, to a lovely house and garden overlooking the Bristol Channel. After a few years, however, he was unable to enjoy his retirement owing to increasing cardiovascular disease, which curtailed his physical activity. He is survived by Gwen, who looked after him devotedly and tirelessly over the difficult years of their retirement; and by two adopted children, a son and a daughter. -ME DEB writes: Walter Black was a surgical enthusiast. He found everything about surgery, clinically and operatively, of consuming interest and transmitted his enthusiasm to everyone about him, particularly those who went to him for training. In the days when the range of investigational techniques was far smaller than is the case today he would analyse every nuance of a patient's history and physical signs to achieve an accuracy of clinical diagnosis that was exceptional. He was also keenly concerned with the techniques of operative surgery and was a beautiful technician. He was particularly enthusiastic about surgery of the thyroid gland and, in the days when anti thyroid drugs were not available, succeeded in treating severely thyrotoxic patients with remarkable safety. He was always generous to his juniors, and I recall the many occasions on which he assisted me with a gastrectomy or colectomy and operated on a hernia himself. No operation was too small or unimportant to deserve less than his best technique. It is interesting for me to recognise, at the end of my surgical career, how so many of the techniques I used were learnt, at the very beginning of my training, from Walter Black.

- He was awarded with MB CHB FRCSED.

General Notes: Lt. Archibald Stafford Allen. 8th Battalion Royal Fusiliers (City of London) Regiment

Date of birth: 3rd May 1890 Date of death: 3rd October 1915

Archibald Stafford Allen was born at Enfield in Middlesex on the 3rd of May 1890 the only son of John Archibald Allen, a publisher, and Elizabeth Mary (nee Smee) Allen of "Wynnstow", Limpsfield in Surrey. He left Hazelwood School in the spring of 1904 for Wellington College where he was in the Stanley from 1904 to 1908. He had intended to go on to Pembroke College Cambridge, but his father's ill health prevented this, and, instead, he went straight into business. "Although this was a great disappointment to him, he bore it with his usual cheerfulness". He devoted much of his spare time to a boys club in Walworth which he had started for poor boys.

On the on the 28th of April 1909 he enlisted as Private C/406 in the Inns of Court Officer Training Corps and served with them for four years, during which time he was learning the printing trade. Following the outbreak of war he was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the 8th Battalion Royal Fusiliers on the 12th of September 1914 and was promoted to Lieutenant on the 20th of January 1915. On the 15th of May 1915 he was married to Florence Mary (nee Hammond) at St Mark's Church Walworth and he embarked for France on the 1st of June 1915.

He was commended by 36th Brigade to 12th Division for the "good work" he had done during a German bombardment on the 9th of August 1915.

On the 3rd of October 1915 the battalion were holding a trench at Vermelles near Loos. The battalion war diary takes up the story:- "In trenches, heavily shelled all day but considering volume of shelling, casualties were fairly small. A digging party ordered to dig a trench from H 13 C 09 directly south for 700 yards. We were unable to do this as our own guns were heavily shelling this bit of ground. Trench marked out but two men killed in doing so; Lt Allen killed instantly by a shell and buried together with Lt Gullick (Lieutenant Arthur Louis Gullick of Pirbright in Surrey) of the 6th Buffs who was killed in reconnaissance outside German wire and brought in by our men at G17 B36. A very good young officer and much missed. Other casualties, 9 men killed and 9 men wounded, mainly by shell fire. In evening, about 10pm 200 men at work on new trench".

He was mentioned in Field Marshall Sir John French's dispatches of the 1st of January 1916 "for gallant and distinguished service in the field" His Colonel wrote:-

"I wish his friends to know the pride we all had for him. Others who knew him would like to hear how he was loved by one and all, what a gallant boy he was, and how he maintained the name of the grand regiment to which we all have the honour to belong. A braver and more gallant boy I have never seen; we all loved him and his men simply adored him.....it was with difficulty we could get him to rest."

He was buried, along with Lieutenant Gullick, behind the trenches at the junction of the Hulluch-Vermelles and Loos-La Bassee roads; his body was later re-interred.

He is commemorated on the war memorial at Wellington College.

Killed in action aged 25

_____

On October 13th, 1964, at the age of 82, Ernest Gladstone Allen died in hospital—he had been at Bootham from 1897 to 1899 and was the son of Alfred Henry Allen, 1868-70. A distinguished career as an architect and town planner led to his serving as President of the Town Planning Institute from 1936 to 1937. Between 1905 and 1914 Ernest Allen worked in partnership with George Pepler and together they won a number of medals for schemes of model housing estates. After George Pepler left to take up the position of Town Planning Inspector with the Local Government Board, Ernest Allen continued his work in partnership, first with Longstreth Thompson and later with Alfred Potter. Much of the work done was concerned with local authority housing schemes. He continued his architectural work until his death. With hobbies of cricket, tennis and gardening and a long term of service on his local parish and rural councils, he became Chairman of Godstone R.D.C. from 1943 to 1947. Ernest Allen lived a full and valuable life. We extend our sympathy tto Mrs. Allen.

Christopher Savage was a consultant ENT surgeon at the Chelmsford and Essex Hospital, and the Southend General Hospital, where he developed a special interest in microsurgery of the ear. Born in Edgbaston, Birmingham, on 21 November 1915, he was part of the third generation of a family of surgeons. His father, Ernest Smallwood Savage, who gained his FRCS in 1896, was a gynaecologist at Birmingham and Wolverhampton. His grandfather, Thomas Savage, who was awarded the FRCS in 1869, was a professor of gynaecology in Birmingham. Christopher Savage's mother Constance was a housewife.

Savage was educated at West House School, Edgbaston, Marlborough College, Gonville and Caius, Cambridge, and then the London Hospital. He managed to do his pre-registration house jobs at the Haymeads Hospital, Bishop's Stortford, before serving as a surgeon lieutenant in the Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve on HMS Havelock on the North Atlantic convoys.

At the end of the Second World War he became a supernumerary registrar at the London Hospital, during which time he gained experience in general surgery and otolaryngology with Charles Keogh, Alan Bowen Davies and Johan Lindahl. Their influence led him to become first assistant to the aural department at the London from 1948 to 1952. He contracted polio in 1953, but fortunately made a near complete recovery.

In 1949 he was appointed to his first consultant post, in Chelmsford, and, in 1953, he was also made a consultant at Southend. Among his consultant colleagues he was respected for his hard work, humour and principles.

He retired in April 1979. He continued to sail at the Blackwater Sailing Club and took up woodcarving and fly fishing. He died from pneumonia on 10 December 2007 at the age of 92. He was survived by his wife Jill née Dawe, whom he married in April 1951, and his three children. His sons James and Robert have continued the family tradition, becoming a general practitioner and a consultant orthopaedic surgeon respectively. His daughter became a physiotherapist. Three of his seven grandchildren have also become doctors.

Francis Corder Clayton becomes an Honorary Freeman of Birmingham. On July 2nd the Birmingham City Council resolved to confer the honorary freedom of the City upon an Old Scholar, Francis Corder Clayton, (1855-8) and the interesting ceremony of presenting the illuminated copy of the resolution, and a casket to contain it, to the new Freeman, took place at the Council House on November 6th. The Lord Mayor (Alderman Bowater) in making the presentation referred to the reasons which had led the Council to confer upon Alderman Clayton "the greatest honour in their power." (We are indebted for the following report of the -speeches to the account of the proceedings in the "Birmingham Post.") "The greatest care was exercised that the freemen should be only those who had rendered eminent services to the city. " "Your public work," the Lord Mayor continued, turning to Alderman Clayton, "entitles you to take a prominent place among our freemen." "Coming to Birmingham in 1867, when you were 24 years of age, you soon made for yourself a high position in com- merce, and had such financial success that twenty-five years ago you retired from business, and you have since devoted all your time to civic service. I say all your time because by remaining single you have more spare time than a man with the cares of a family. One is not surprised at your being a bachelor. What else could be expected from one whose youthful playthings and hobbies were differential cal-culus, integral calculus, trigonometry, and conic sections?" Proceeding, the Lord Mayor spoke of the youngest freeman's genius for finance. There was not time to enumerate all the public objects that had had the advantage of Alderman Clayton's energetic support, but he would mention a few. From 1877, for eleven years, he was a Poor-law Guardian, and took an active part in establishing the Marston Green Homes, so that a certain class of children should not start life with the label "Workhouse. "He had been at one time chairman of the committee, and helped to start the insti-tution on its successful career. In 1882 Alderman Clayton entered the City Council, and at once joined the Finance and Public Works Committees. He was appointed chairman of the Finance Committee in 1886, and had held that office ever since, except for the two years he was Mayor. During that period, in spite of the saying "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," he had borrowed ^,13,681,000 in loans, bearing a rate of interest, thanks to his ability, which compared favourably with that paid upon most municipal loans in the country. Also, during that time, the Finance Committee had passed for pay- ments accounts of the several committees amounting to over ^ 2 5,000,000. Having alluded to the events, including a Royal visit, which made Alderman Clayton's mayoralty in 1889 and 1890 notable, the Lord Mayor spoke appreciatively of his services to the University, remarking that his contributions to the funds, and the presentation by him of the artistic statue of the late King Edward, were evidences of his generosity. Alderman Clayton's work outside the Council and the University, he added, had been most extensive, and it would be eastter to mention the very few public societies he had not assisted than the great number he had helped. "In conclusion," said his lordship to Alderman Clayton, "because you are a representative of all that is best in the active public life of Birmingham, and have given ungrudgingly of your time and energy to the common interests of your fellow citizens, on their behalf I offer you the right hand of fellowship, and admit you as an honorary freeman of this city. " (Loud applause.) The Lord Mayor here shook hands with the new freeman, and passed on to him the handsomely illuminated scroll and the casket, which he remarked was a splendid piece of Birmingham workmanship. The casket is an excellent example of silversmith work, having been fashioned entirely by hand. The body is divided into panels with representations of Truth, Justice, Mercy, and a figure symbolising Progress. These are all in low relief repousse. A panel in the centre of the body bears a representation of the Birmingham University, also in low relief repousse. The plinth is decorated with crystals at intervals, set in the antique style. Round the margin of the cover is the super- scription in raised letters. Within this there is debate fluting having for its centre a representation of the arms of the city in low relief. Having signed the roll, Alderman Clayton rose to reply, and was received with applause. He said it was a proud moment in his life when, four months previously, he was admitted an honorary freeman of the city, but when he looked at the distinguished names on the roll he felt prouder still. He thanked his colleagues for the great honour they had done him; for of all honours, there was none to be compared with that of being appreciated by those with whom he had been associated so long. It was nearly forty-six years since he settled in Birmingham. Ten years later he entered public life as a member of the Board of Guardians. Very different was the way of an election to that body in those days. In consequence of what had taken place a few years previously it was agreed that the Board of sixty members should consist of forty liberals and twenty conservatives. A select few sat round a table a month before the day of election, and after respecting vested interests in the shape of old members, they arranged the additional names to be elected by undertaking to get sufficient voting papers filled up on their behalf. That was delightfully simple, but the by-election at which he was first elected was simpler still. He was asked one January to serve when a vacancy occurred, and was elected in May, and the first he knew about it was a paragraph in the next morning's paper. Many had entered the City Council after an apprenticeship to public life as Guardians, and he believed it had been a good experience for those who had done so. They dealt in the Council chamber to so large an extent with impersonal matters that some knowledge of their poorer neighbours' surroundings had a beneficial influence on their work. He noted with satisfaction that the boundary work between the work of the Board of Guardians and the City Council was becoming more attenuated, and they might possibly at some future time see it all merged into one body. After five years' service as a Guardian he entered the Council, being opposed by a very pleasant gentleman, who desired to expose what he considered were the iniquities of the Liberal caucus of those days. That gentleman had large audiences, and he (Alderman Clayton) had a still larger number of votes, and both were satisfied. After three more elections, of which two were contested, he entered that haven of rest and happiness, the aldermanic bench. Since his first election to the Council over 200 new comers had followed him. For some few years he served on the Public Works and Gas Committees, but his lot had been cast principally with finance and water. As chairman of the Finance Committee for many years, he had endeavoured to steer a fair mean between parsimony on the one hand and a too-generous expenditure on the other. With the extended views of local government, particularly in those of health and education, it would be more and more difficult, he might say impossible, to keep rates from rising, so long as the present system of raising money for local expenditure remained unaltered. They had been looking for additional help from the Imperial Exchequer, but it never came. At present that contribution was only one-fifth of their expenditure. It would be a pleasant change when he was relieved from membership of the Finance Committee, and could go in for "improvements" as some of his colleagues did. He wanted to try the experiment some day to see what it was like. In May, when the time came for settling the rates for the year, the chairman of the Finance Committee had a bad fortnight. He found the requirements of the various committees much higher than he could recommend to the Council, and therefore he interviewed the various departments, only to find that the breadth of view, entertained by each as to their own requirements was very great. Still, the committees had helped him in the past to a considerable extent. The whole business, however, had grown too large for one person to tackle, and the new plan of a Consultative Committee, in which the proposals were brought before all the spending committees at the same time, giving a bird's eye view of the situation, had worked admirably. It was during his Mayoralty that the Welsh water scheme was approved by the Council, and he could only say now, what he said in its early stages, that there was no other course open to them. In fact that was the opinion of all who had carefully studied the subject. Unfortunately there was as yet no daylight on its future from a financial standpoint. It had been his privilege to be associated with several institutions in the city, and some of these had also had their financial trials. Amongst others, there was the Queen's Hospital, which he was glad to say had lived to see happier times. The University was having its trials at the present time, but he hoped they were now on the turn for the better. Whey could spend double as much money as they did, and advantageously, if they had the means. The field of original research was "white unto the harvest," but others were reaping because in Birmingham they had not had the means to sow. The Government were offering them £ 1,200 a year for original research in a specialised field, but owing to their poverty is providing their small share the scheme was delayed. He expressed regret that his colleague of so many year's standing, the late Alderman Beale, was not with them that afternoon, and in conclusion thanked the Council for the handsome casket in which the scroll was placed, saying it would always be a pleasant reminder of thirty-seven years in the public work of the city. CLAYTON.— On February 22nd, Francis Corder Clayton (1855-1858), aged 84 years.

In 1915 received a commission and left England for Egypt, -and is now at Salonika; gazetted full Lieutenant 1916 (121st Co. A.S.C., 28th Divisional Train)

He was the basis for the character of "Peter Madox" in "The English Patient". Clayton spent nearly 20 years with the Egyptian Survey department during the 1920s and 1930s extensively mapping large areas of previously unmapped desert. In 1931, Clayton was running triangulation from Wadi Halfa to Uweinat when he came across refugees fleeing from the Italian occupation of Kufra, via Uweinat and helped save many from death in the arid desert. Clayton had collaborated extensively with Ralph Bagnold in the preparation and mapping associated with Bagnold's pre-war exploration trips. He served in the British Army's Long Range Desert Group (LRDG) during World War II. At the Clayton spent nearly 20 years with the Egyptian Survey department during the 1920s and 1930s extensively mapping large areas of previously unmapped desert. In 1931, Clayton was running triangulation start of the war Clayton was a government surveyor in Tanganyika. Bagnold had him returned to Egypt because of his detailed knowledge of the Western Desert. He was commissioned into the Intelligence Corps. Clayton was leading "T" Patrol in a planned attack on Kufra when the patrol was engaged by the Italian Auto-Saharan Company on 31 January 1941, near Gebel Sherif. During the action Captain Clayton was wounded and his car damaged. He along with his colleagues was taken prisoner. He was moved to the Abruzzo region in Italy where he was visited by Laszlo Almasy after Almasy's spy mission, Operation Salaam, to transport two German spies across the Libyan desert to Cairo.

9-Maj. Peter Hollis Clayton was born on 14 Jun 1928 in Croydon, Surrey and died on 19 Jul 2011 at age 83.

General Notes: Peter Hollis Clayton was born in Croydon on 14 June 1928 to Patrick Andrew and Ethel (Ellie) Clayton, née Wyatt. Peter's father worked in Cairo for the Egyptian Desert Surveys Department and Ellie and Peter joined him there in August 1928. Patrick worked with Count Lászlo Almásy, and some believe he was the model for the character of Peter Madox in The English Patient. In 1938, with war threatening, Peter returned to England with his mother to continue his education, first at St Michael's, and then at Sevenoaks School, where he was a member of School House, played rugby and was a house captain and prefect. Conscripted into the Army in 1946, Peter was commissioned in 1948 into the Queen's Royal Regiment, stationed in Germany. He took on the role of Motor Transport Officer, experience that would be invaluable later in the desert. Keen to return to Arabia, he attended a three-month Arabic Language Course in late 1952 and a one-year course at the Middle East Centre for Arabic Studies in Lebanon in 1953. The Centre was widely believed to be a school for Western spies. Having qualified, Peter joined the Trucial Oman Levies in January 1954 as a squadron commander, where his adventurous spirit, fluent Arabic, army training and deep understanding of Arab culture made him an ideal recruit. Peter played a key role in evicting the Saudi insurgents and then commanded a joint Saudi/ Trucial Oman Levies police force patrolling the disputed oasis area. He was invested with the MBE in 1956 for his services. He was admired and respected by many local people and their leaders, and the ruler of Dubai asked him personally to establish the first Dubai police force. This Peter did, and the new service mustered at Naif on 1 June 1956, with 29 members. Today it is 15,000 strong. He also became a close, lifelong friend of Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al Nahyan, who later founded the United Arab Emirates. From 1971 to 1994 Peter was very active in the Middle East, using his contacts, knowledge of the area, and military experien

Knight, Anne (1786–1862), slavery abolitionist and campaigner for women's rights, was born on 2 November 1786 at Chelmsford, Essex, the third of the eight children of William Knight (1756–1814), wholesale grocer, and his wife, Priscilla, née Allen (1753–1829). Her mother was first cousin to the philanthropist William Allen, while she herself was first cousin to the chemist William Allen Miller. Her younger sister Maria (1791–1870) married in 1814 the abolitionist John Candler (1787–1869) and with him travelled to the West Indies and United States in the anti-slavery cause; they were for some years (1842–6) superintendents of The Retreat, York, the Quaker mental hospital founded by William Tuke.

In 1824, having by then a good knowledge of French and German, Anne Knight travelled on the continent with a group of fellow Quakers, combining sightseeing with religious and philanthropic concerns. From her base in the Chelmsford Ladies' Anti-Slavery Society she was deeply involved with the anti-slavery movement, travelling frequently to London and working with Thomas Clarkson, Joseph Sturge, Richard and Hannah Webb, and Elizabeth Pease (later Nichol). During the 1830s she returned several times to France in the same cause, in 1834 undertaking a speaking tour. The 1840 World's Anti-Slavery Convention in London gave her the opportunity to meet such American abolitionists as William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, and Lucretia Mott. The movement for women's suffrage in Britain has been dated from the exclusion of women from the floor of this conference, for it drew women's attention to their marginal status within the movement, and highlighted the limitations placed on their capacity to act in the public sphere. In July 1848 the first women's rights convention in the United States was held at Seneca Falls, New York. The previous year an anonymous leaflet was issued in Britain claiming that 'Never will the nations of the earth be well governed, until both sexes, as well as all parties, are fully represented and have an influence, a voice, and a hand in the enactment and administration of the laws'. It has been persuasively argued that the author was Anne Knight. Certainly from the 1840s she had been writing frequent letters (she was a voluminous correspondent) to American abolitionists, including Angelina Grimké, and she was capable of sharp rejoinders to Chartists who suggested that the class struggle took precedence over that for women's rights.

Although Knight was in many ways typical of nonconformist women abolitionists, her views were more radical than many: a sympathizer with Chartism, she was interested in the British and French utopian socialist movements, maintained links with the White Quakers in Ireland, and in the 1840s supported the radical Garrisonian wing of the American abolition movement. Her support for women's rights led her in 1851 to be involved in forming the first organization for women's suffrage in Britain, the Sheffield Female Reform Association. In 1847 or 1848 Anne Knight left Chelmsford for Paris and, after living there enthusiastically (despite her Quaker upbringing) through the year of revolutions, she was at the international peace conference in Paris in 1849. Lucretia Mott described her in the 1840s as 'a singular looking woman—very pleasant and polite' (F. B. Tolles, ed., Slavery and 'the Woman Question', 1952, 29).

In the late 1850s Anne Knight moved to Waldersbach, a village in the Vosges, south-west of Strasbourg. This had been the home of the pastor Jean-Frédéric Oberlin (1740–1820), whose philanthropic work she revered. Here she lived for the last few years of her life, lodging with Oberlin's grandson, and died there after a short illness on 4 November 1862.

Researches into Anne Knight's life have been hindered by persistent confusion of her with another Anne Knight [née Waspe] (1792–1860), children's writer. This Anne Knight was born at Woodbridge, Suffolk, on 28 October 1792, the eldest of the eight children of Jonathan Waspe (1756?–1818), a leather-cutter, and his wife, Phebe, née Gibbs (1761–1851). She married in 1818 her first cousin and fellow Quaker James Knight (1794–1820) of Southwark. After her husband's early death, she returned to Woodbridge, where by 1826 she was keeping a school. She was a close friend of the poet Bernard Barton, and is frequently mentioned in Charles Lamb's letters to him. She was the author of a number of books for children, certainly School-Room Lyrics (1846), and most probably of Poetic Gleanings (1827), Mornings in the Library (1828), with a prefatory poem by Barton, and Mary Gray (1831), works which were previously ascribed to Anne Knight the social campaigner. Anne Knight the author died at her home in Woodbridge on 11 December 1860, and was buried in the Quaker burial-ground there.

General Notes: Francis Bowyer Miller (1828-1887), assayer, was born on 18 December 1828 at Edgbaston, Warwickshire, England, youngest son of William Miller, brewer, and his wife Frances Bowyer, née Vaux, a writer of children's books. Both parents were Quakers, and the Miller and Vaux families were active in agitation against the slave trade. Francis was educated at King Edward's Grammar School, Birmingham, and King's College, London. In 1849 he joined a British Admiralty expedition to the Bight of Benin, Africa, to see if lagoons there could be used by British gunboats in the suppression of the slave trade. Returning to England about 1850, he worked with a mining company in Cornwall for twelve months then became an assistant to his brother William, professor of chemistry at King's College and non-resident assayer to the Royal Mint and the Bank of England.

In November 1853 Francis Miller and W. S. Jevons were appointed to the newly established Sydney branch of the Royal Mint, partly on William Miller's recommendation. Offered a retainer of £100 per annum, they were expected to establish their own assay offices and to undertake work for private banks and individuals as well as for the mint on piece rates. By the time the mint opened in May 1855, however, he and Jevons had become full-time public servants with no need to take private work. On 11 January 1854 in the Parish Church of St Clement Danes, Westminster, Miller had married Alicia, only daughter of Maurice Fitzgerald O'Connell, R.N. Two months later the Millers sailed with their servant for Sydney in the Granite City. They were to have four children.

On arrival in Sydney, Miller set up an assay office in Bligh Street. In November 1859 he became a member of the Philosophical (later Royal) Society of New South Wales, before which, in July 1860, he read a paper on the detection of spurious gold, concerned in particular with a species of fake gold 'nuggets' that had deceived many Sydney storekeepers. Rachel Henning, to whom he showed a sample 'nugget' at Bathurst in July 1861, found him to be 'rather a clever, agreeable man'.

Miller's crowning scientific achievement was his development of a process of refining and toughening gold by means of chlorine gas. He patented this process in London in June 1867 and registered it as an invention before the New South Wales Legislative Assembly in November. Twelve months later his paper describing the process was read before the Chemical Society, London, and by December 1869, when Miller read another paper on the subject before the Royal Society of New South Wales, his method had been successfully put into operation at the Sydney Mint and by the Bank of New Zealand at Auckland, New Zealand.

In 1870 Miller was transferred to the new Melbourne branch of the Royal Mint, and was paid £2000 for the sole Victorian rights to the gold-refining process. He sold the 'remarkably handsome Gothic villa and grounds' that he had built on the waterfront at Double Bay and relocated his family to the Melbourne suburb of Kew. By then Miller's method had been introduced into mints in England, the United States of America and Norway and he had travelled to England and the U.S.A. to advise on the process.

Superintendent of the bullion office at the Melbourne Mint from 1877, in 1884 he was briefly acting deputy master. Chronic Bright's disease forced him to take sick leave from June 1887 and he died in his home at Kew on 17 September 1887, survived by his wife, two sons and one daughter. He was buried with Anglican rites in Boroondara cemetery. At the time of his death he was a member of the Philosophical Society of Philadelphia, a fellow of the Chemical Society of London and of the Institute of Chemistry of Great Britain and a corresponding member of the Royal Society of New South Wales. In 2005 the Miller process was still used worldwide to treat molten gold.

  - 7-Charlotte Allen<sup>6,7,20,21,22</sup> was born on 24 Jul 1817 in Maidenhead, Berkshire, died on 12 Mar 1891 in Nice, France at age 73, and was buried in FBG Friars, Rosemary Street, Bristol.
  - 8-Emily Sturge<sup>6,7</sup> was born on 20 Apr 1847 in Highbury Villa, Cotham New Road, Cotham, Bristol, Gloucestershire, died on 3 Jun 1892 in Chilliswood, Tyndall's Park, Cotham, Bristol, Gloucestershire at age 45, and was buried in FBG Friars, Rosemary Street, Bristol. The cause of her death was From injuries, having been thrown from her horse.

General Notes: Sturge, Emily (1847–1892), campaigner for women's education and suffrage, was born on 20 April 1847 at Highbury Villa, Cotham New Road, Cotham, Bristol, the eldest of the eleven children of William Sturge (1820–1905) and his wife, Charlotte Allen Sturge (1817–1891). Four of her sisters were also involved to a greater and lesser extent in the movement for women's education. The Sturge family were prominent members of the Society of Friends and were linked by marriage and descent to a number of Quaker families. Emily was a great-niece of the Quaker Ann(e) Knight who had campaigned for women's right to vote in the 1840s, and in the memoir of Emily (1892) Charlotte Sturge wrote that Ann Knight 'would have rejoiced to see how far her desires have been fulfilled and will probably be yet further carried out' (Goodbody, 50).

William Sturge was a partner in the family business of surveying which prospered in the nineteenth century. In 1864 the family moved into Chilliswood (later part of the University of Bristol) in Cotham, and the third daughter, Elizabeth, lived there until her death in 1944 at the age of ninety-four. The house was a centre for visiting lecturers and for drawing-room meetings during the suffrage campaigns of the 1870s. Emily was described by her Aunt Matilda as 'shy and sensitive in infancy' (E. Sturge, 79), and this developed into a deep reserve which gave the impression of aloofness. She was also 'a woman of considerable personal attractions, a little above the middle height, with good features, a fine bearing, and magnificent hair, which gave a certain distinction to her appearance' (ibid., 84). In early life she broke away from the evangelicalism of her upbringing, and experienced periods of religious doubt, though she continued to attend Friends' meetings all her life. Her sister Elizabeth said that 'we—her sisters—hardly knew how much strong feeling her rather cold and distant manner covered until, after her death, her private memoranda revealed it' (ibid., 79). In one of these memoranda Emily wonders

how it is that I come to be where I am—how it has come about that I am absorbed in the practical work of life. If the line of least resistance had not lain in this direction I could have lived the student's life. (Goodbody, 44)

After attending schools at Weston-super-Mare and then Frenchay, near Bristol, Emily's own education was cut short at the age of about fourteen, and thereafter she was largely self-taught. In contemplating the life of a student Emily may have been envying her younger sisters Mary Charlotte, known as Carta (1852–1929), and Caroline (1861–1922), who attended the University College which opened at Bristol in 1876. Carta went on to study at Newnham College, Cambridge, gaining the moral science tripos in 1887, and Caroline qualified as a doctor at London University. One of Emily's brothers, William Allen Sturge (1850–1919), was also medically qualified and married to Dr Emily Bovell, one of the seven female medical students expelled from Edinburgh University during the Sophie Jex-Blake struggle for women's access to medical training in the early 1870s.

The 'practical work' of Emily Sturge's brief life was almost wholly concerned with promoting women's suffrage and women's education. From 1878 until her death she was honorary secretary of the west of England branch of the National Society for Women's Suffrage. The West of England Suffrage Society had been formed in Bristol in 1868 at the home of Matthew Davenport Hill, whose daughter Florence was a founding member. Emily Sturge was a member by 1872–3, and from the 1870s until about 1885 she was involved in travelling to public meetings, giving public speeches, and campaigning through the Liberal Party to obtain women's franchise by electoral reform. She was a member of the Bristol Women's Liberal Association, formed about 1880 alongside similar branches formed in other Quaker strongholds, whereby parliamentary and municipal candidates were asked to state their views of women's suffrage. Women were not enfranchised by Gladstone's 1884–5 reforms and Emily Sturge moved across to support the Liberal Unionists in the home rule split. She was a member of the committee of the West Bristol Temperance Society. Emily Sturge was elected as a Liberal to the Bristol school board in January 1880. School boards were the first form of elected body open to women, and Emily succeeded Helena Richardson as the second woman member, having come second in the poll at the age of thirty-two. She had experience of teaching in a Friends' Sunday school, and took an interest in an elementary school for girls run by the British and Foreign School Society. During her membership of the board she campaigned for free school meals, established as 'penny dinners' in 1884; was involved in the setting up of evening schools, chairing the evening school committee from 1886; and was concerned to ensure equal access for women and girls to technical instruction and to promote the training and status of women

Emily Sturge achieved the latter aim through the new University College, founded in 1876. The college was a direct result of the Clifton Association for Promoting Higher Education for Women, formed in Bristol in 1868. The association founded the Lectures for Ladies in the 1860s, which were attended by the Sturge sisters and are described by Elizabeth Sturge in her Reminiscences (1928). The new University College, to become the University of Bristol in 1909, was open to both men and women, except for the medical school. In its early years money was a problem and Emily Sturge organized a successful fund-raising campaign in the late 1880s. She helped to establish a day training school for women teachers at the University College, which opened in October 1892: Marion Pease, a graduate of the new University College and a member of another key Bristol Quaker family, the Frys, was appointed the first mistress of method.

Emily Sturge was also involved in setting up at Bristol a school of cookery to train domestic science teachers, using moneys set aside by the technical instruction committee of the town council, and derived from the Technical Instruction Act of 1889 and the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Act of 1890. Unlike the school boards, town councils were still restricted to men, and following receipt of a memorial from 'certain ladies' in October 1891, Emily Sturge, who wanted grants for technical education to benefit girls as well as boys, was invited to assist with the formation of the school of cookery. It was to open in September 1893. Emily Sturge was re-elected to the Bristol school board in January 1892 shortly before her death at her home, Chilliswood, Tyndall's Park, Cotham, Bristol, on 3 June 1892, from injuries sustained after being thrown from her horse. She was buried in the Quaker burial-ground at Friars Meeting-House, Rosemary Street, Bristol.

General Notes: WILLIAM ALLEN STURGE, M.V.O., MT.D.LOND., F.R.C.P. IN Dr. Allen Sturge, who passed away on March 27th after several years of cardiac instability and poor health, we have lost an accomplished physician and a distinguished archaeologist. He came of a fine Quaker sbock on both sides. He was born at Bristol in 1850, and began his professional studies at the Bristol Medical School, and continued them at University College Hospital, London, where he soon made his mark and gained "the warm regard of his teachers and of his fellow students. He was a close and accurate observer, keen in reasoning and original in speculation. After holding the post of physician's-assistant he became a resident officer and subsequently registrar at the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy. There he laid the foundations of a wide and thoughtful survey of nervous diseases. Having taken his M.D. at the University of London, he followed up his studies in nervous diseases by a lengthened stay in Paris in 1876. That was a time when Chlarcot, like a magnet, was attracting neurologists young and old to his clinic at the Salpetriore. But Sturge did not limit his studies to neurology; he worked at general pathiology and medicine, and followed closely Fournier's practice at the St. Louis. Both Charcot and Fourn'ier bore generous testimony in after years to Sturge's critical acumen and originality. When in 1877 he returned to London ritical acumen and originality. When in 1877 he returned to London he was appointed physician and pathologist to the Royal Free Hospital, and one of the lecturers to the Women's Medical School. His strong liberal sentiments made Itkia an early and warm supporter of women's medical education. He was married to a talented lady doctor-Miss Emily Bovell-and they started in practice in Wimpole Street. There seemed a distinguished career opening for Sturge as a neurologist, a general phy'sdcian, and a clinical -teacher. He had the gift of fluents aizd luminous exposition, and was eagerly listened to, not only by his students, but by the members of the Londoni medical societies. Unfortunately there only remain four of his medical' papers available. Of these, in every way the most important and characteristic is one in the fifth volume of the Proceedings of the Medical Society of London, p. 357, on'. thie study of muscular atrophy as an aid to the physiological investigation of the spinal cord. In this paper there are some original clinical observations of considerable interest, but there are also very lucid, and discriminating statements on the physiological grouping of muscular atrophies and their diagnostic importance which are valuable still as sound and helpful generalizations. His three papers in the twelfth and fourteenth volumes of the Clinical Society's transactions on a case of erythromelalgia, on a case of spondylitis, and on nerve stretching are good examples of Sturge's gift of not only narrating the salient features of any case, but of setting fortlh it general bearing. Sturge was exceedingly humane. From his studentship, onwards he took the 'deepest interest in the welfare of hip patients. He never spared his efforts, especially for peo chronic nervous cases, to make the tI of their condition, and he was so well read anod wide in his it, ellectual sympathies that it was no wonder that many educated men and 'women found in 'him a tower of strength, especially in conditions of overstrain. But in 18 his wife's . 4th began seriously to flag, and he- came to the conclusi8;"that for her saie he ought to seek amilder climate...'Te determined to settle in Nice, and he made it his homp for twenty-seven years during the late...... etc. etc. SEE....

William Allen Sturge was born of Quaker parents in Bristol, where his father, William Sturge, was a wealthy surveyor. He attended local schools until 1865 when he was sent to a Quaker school in London. There, while playing soccer, he injured his knees. He stayed with his uncle while he was recuperating from the knee injury. His uncle, a physician, had sons studying medicine, and it was during this stay that William developed an interest in medicine. This was contrary to his father's wishes; wanting instead that his son take up the family business. His father relented, however, and allowed him to pursue his interest in medicine. He commenced his medical studies at Bristol Medical School in 1868. He was a very industrious young man who, in the pursuit of his interests, neglected his own health. He fell ill of diphtheria in June, 1869. In August, after recovering from the illness, William went on vacation in Switzerland with his family. While there he developed rheumatic fever, an illness that lasted for several weeks. After recovering, he resumed his studies and passed the Primary Examination of the College of Surgeons in 1870. He went to London in 1871 to continue his studies at University College, but had a second attack of rheumatic fever in 1872 which forced him to take a prolonged rest. His father sent him on a tour in the East in 1873. As a medical attendant, William accompanied a wealthy young man named Lukas to Egypt. After returning from Egypt he resumed his medical studies and received his medical degree from University College, London, in 1873. After holding the post of Physician's Assistant, he became a resident medical officer and subsequently registrar of the National Hospital for Paralysis and Epilepsy and here commenced his interest in neurology. In 1876 he went to Paris to study with Jean Martin Charcot (1825-1893), but also gained experience in general pathology and medicine with Jean Alfred Fournier (1832-1915) at the St. Louis Hospital. Both Charcot and Fournier were highly impressed with Sturge's intelligence and originality. It was in Paris that he met his wife, Emily Bovell, who was also a physician. Emily Bovell was one of the original half dozen women who gained admission to the Medical School of Edinburgh University, only to be physically ejected by the male students and faculty. All of these women eventually completed their medical training elsewhere and all achieved distinction in their own particular field. Sturge was strongly liberal and was one of the keenest supporters of women's medical education. They married in September 1877 and returned to London to set up a practice together in Wimpole Street. He was appointed physician and pathologist to the Royal Free Hospital, and a lecturer to the Women's Medical School. He was a fine speaker, an excellent teacher and extremely interested in the welfare of his patients. He had a very large practice of patients with organic conditions and also of patients with psychosomatic problems. In 1880 his wife became ill and Sturge decided to move to Nice, where he lived for the next 27 years during the autumn, winter and spring. He gradually became very well known and socially prominent as a physician in the Riviera and looked after Queen Victoria and her family during her four visits to Cimez. In recognition of this service, Queen Victoria awarded him gifts and an MVO, which is an order and decoration reserved for people who have rendered service to the Royal Family of a personal nature. Emily Bovell died in her early 40's in 1885. The following year William married Julia Sherriff, who was his nurse in Nice, Julia was the daughter of a wealthy iron master in the North of England. Because of the summer heat in Nice, the couple used to take their vacations at this time of the year. Sturge was very fond of travelling. It was during his travels that he became greatly interested in archaeology and began to collect Greek vases and Palaeolithic and Neolithic flint implements. He had rheumatic fever in 1894 which recurred in 1899 and in 1907 he decided to give up practice and return to England. During his holidays he studied early Greek art and was a collector of Etruscan vases, devoting most of his leisure time to the study of archaeology. He settled at Icklingham Hall in Suffolk, which was near the diggings where the Piltdown skull was found. There he established one of the finest private museums of flint implements in the world, carefully classified and catalogued. His collection of more than 100.000 pieces is now in the British Museum. Sturge was one of the founders and first president of the Society of Prehistoric Archaeology of East Anglia His collection of Greek amphora is housed in the Toronto Museum, Canada as the Sturge Collection

In the winter of 1918 he suffered from influenza and then nephritis and subsequently died in March 1919. William Sturge left no children to bear his name.

General Notes: "E. Jane Gay was born in Nashua, New Hampshire in 1830 and was educated in New York. In 1856, she traveled with her friend Catherine Melville to Macon, Georgia to found a school for young women. Gay taught at the school until its closing in 1860, and went on to administer a Washington, DC school for children with Melville until the outbreak of the US Civil War in 1861. From 1861 to 1865, Gay worked alongside Dorothea Lynde Dix as a nurse tending to wounded soldiers for the Union Army. After the war, Gay worked first as a tutor to President Andrew Johnson's grandchildren, then as a clerk in a dead-letter office (1866–1883). In 1888, Gay began teaching herself photography. In 1889, she was hired as the photographer and cook for an expedition led by anthropologist Alice C. Fletcher, an old friend and agent for the US Department of the Interior's Bureau of Indian Affairs. From 1889 to 1893, Gay traveled as the photographer with the expedition to the Nez Perce Indian Reservation in Idaho. Gay's letters and photographs vividly capture the expedition's experiences with the Nez Perce in the American West. After her return from the West, Gay lived in Washington, DC until 1906, when she traveled to Europe with one of her nieces, Emma Jane Gay (1859–1924). While in England, Gay and her niece published her photographs, illustrations, and letters from the Fletcher expedition to the Nez Perce in a two-volume book entitled Choup-nit-ki, With the Nez Perce. Besides providing a first-hand account of US policy toward the American Indians under the Dawes Act, the book is an excellent window into the social conditions on the American frontier in the late 19th century.

After publishing Choup-nit-ki, With the Nez Perce, Gay decided to remain in Somerset, England, where she lived with her friend Dr. Caroline Sturge. Gay died in England in 1919 at the age of 89.

- She worked as an Examiner in Operative Midwifery at The Royal Free Hospital Medical School before 1909.
- She had a residence in 1909 in Congresbury, Somerset.

Hingston Fox was born at Stoke Newington, the third of the seven medical sons of Joseph John Fox, a Quaker surgeon from Cornwall, and his wife Sarah Angell Allen of Stoke Newington. He qualified from the London Hospital in 1874, and, after a resident appointment in the Royal Cornwall Infirmary, made a voyage to Australia as a ship's surgeon, to ward off threatened pulmonary tuberculosis. On his return he assisted his father in general practice, and at the same time established a footing in Finsbury Circus and began work for life assurance companies, which later claimed a large share of his energies. He began consulting practice in 1902 and was assistant physician to the Mount Vernon Hospital for Consumption from 1916 to 1919. The affairs of the Hunterian Society, of which he was president in 1912, and medical history occupied much of his leisure. He published a book on Dr. John Fothergill and his Friends in 1919. Fox was a quiet and devout man, a Greek and Hebrew scholar, and a student of geology and birds and trees. He married in 1879 Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Tylor, and had one son and seven daughters. He was a brother of R. F. Fox, F.R.C.P. He died at his home at Jordans, Beaconsfield.

J. TYLOR FOX

J. Tylor Fox was the son of R. Kingston Fox and Elizabeth Tylor, and came of a long line of doctors; no less than six generations. He was at Bootham in 1898-9 before the time when any serious work in Biology was done, and in fact some years before the College Class was started. On leaving he went to the City of London School, whence he proceeded by scholarship to Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, and to the London Hospital from which he qualified as medical practitioner in 1910.

During the first world war he acted as medical officer under the Friend's war-victims service at Buzuluk, in the famine area in Russia. Returning to England in 1918, he became medical superintendent of the Lingfield Epileptic Colony in Surrey and wrote many articles on the treatment of the disease for scientific journals. His work at Lingfield was continued under great difficulties through the second world war, part of the colony being severely damaged by a flying bomb and a number of patients being evacuated to Mansfield. This involved a considerable amount of travel to and fro under very wearing conditions, and shortly after peace was declared, his health made retirement advisable. He continued, however, to work for epileptics, and was the means of fitting many of them into places where they could be useful in the community at large.

This bare skeleton of the events of his career fails to give a clear picture in two important respects. In the first place, it does not succeed in showing his great eminence as an authority on the subject which was specially his own, and in the second it fails to make clear the lovable humility of his character, which at a first meeting sometimes concealed this, but when one knew him better so much enhanced it. He married Elsie, daughter of the late Edwin Gilbert. She survives him with a daughter and two sons, both of whom are following the medical profession.

b.24 Dec 1858 d.15 June 1940

MD Lond MRCS LSA FRCP (1925)

Fortescue Fox was the seventh son of Joseph John Fox, a Stoke Newington surgeon who came of a Cornish Quaker family, and his wife Sarah Angell Allen. He qualified at the London Hospital in 1882 and was house physician to Sir Andrew Clark; but precarious health took him away from hospital work, first on a voyage to China as a ship's surgeon, and then to a temporary post at Strathpeffer Spa in Ross-shire, where he remained to practise for twenty years. He returned to London finally in 1905, and in 1913, when he produced his Principles and Practice of Medical Hydrology, he was already accepted as an authority on British and foreign spas. During the 1914-1918 War his specialised practice vanished and he concentrated on the care of the disabled. He insisted on the value of various forms of baths and exercise for the restoration of injured limbs; he wrote Physical Remedies for Disabled Soldiers (1917), worked with Sir Robert Jones at the Military Orthopaedic Hospital, Shepherd's Bush, and introduced the "whirlpool" arm and leg baths. A pioneer of what was later called rehabilitation, he was impressed by the need for concurrent treatment and training of the disabled, and his ideas on this and on resettlement were partially realised in the Enham Village Centre, of which he was for a year the first medical director.

As a physician, he was interested in people even more than in diseases, and his approach to each case was correspondingly personal, including a search for environmental or social factors in the illness. A therapist by nature, he made full use of drugs, but was unfashionable in his faith in " airs, waters, and places " as remedial agents. He urged that clinics should be set up in cities to reduce rheumatic disabilities, and the British Red Cross Clinic for Rheumatism was largely the result of his leadership and planning. But he was also eager that spas and coastal resorts should be used more widely, with financial aid from public funds for poorer patients, and he helped to found the British Health Resorts Association. To promote the scientific study of climates and waters, he formed the International Society of Medical Hydrology and edited its Archives for several years from 1922. When, in his old age, some of his foreign associates became political refugees, he spared no pains to help them. Fox remained active in practice and in persuasive writing until the last days of a life of ardent and often far-sighted effort. Sensitive and latterly frail, he felt acutely the rebuffs that come to innovators. But he had many compensating interests— in poetry, archaeology, travel, painting and gardening. He married the daughter of Rev. W. S. McDougall and had three daughters and three sons— one of them T. F. Fox, F.R.C.P. He was a brother of R. Hingston Fox, F.R.C.P. He died in London.

Sir Theodore Fox, a medical editor who exerted a profoundly beneficial influence on the practice of medicine in his time, began his work on the staff of The Lancet in 1925 and he retired in 1964, after 20 years as its editor. He came from a long family line of Quaker doctors and his mother was the daughter of a Presbyterian minister in the Scottish Highlands - an ancestry that hardly gave him a taste for relaxation or merriment but imbued him with a dedication and a resolve to see right prevail, which infused all he did. From Leighton Park School he won a scholarship to Pembroke College, Cambridge. In 1917 he wanted to join the Army but his family persuaded him to enter the Friends Ambulance Unit and he became an orderly on an ambulance train in France. When the war was over he went up to Cambridge and subsequently became house physician to Sir Robert Hutchison [Munk's Roll, Vol.V, p.208] at the London Hospital. Later, after an expedition to India as a ship's surgeon, he accepted an offer of locum work from the editor of The Lancet - a post which became more than temporary.

With the advent of the 1939-45 war, Fox spent three years in the RAMC including a year as a regimental medical officer, some of the time in France. Later he worked in the Army blood transfusion service and edited the Army Medical Department Bulletin at the War Office. The Lancets request for his return was eventually granted and he rejoined the journal's staff at its wartime office in Aylesbury, before its return to London with Fox as editor. He was soon deep in the often turbulent discussion about the coming National Health Service in Britain. The Lancet set out to argue the case for freeing medicine from the 'marketplace' and for eschewing the fee-for-service which many doctors wanted. Though Fox wished to see the establishment of an organized State service he never missed an opportunity to remind the profession that its prime duty would still be to patients and that doctors should never regard themselves as mere technical workers in a State-run and State-financed service. When a niggling editorial in the British Medical Journal suggested that the BMA's attitude should be to cooperate with the NHS while acting as a watchdog for the profession, The Lancet retaliated: 'Since when has cooperation become an attribute of watchdogs?' His journal's influence at this time was considerable perhaps even crucial to the outcome, for if the NHS had not begun in 1948 more or less under the terms that Fox supported in face of much professional opposition then it is unlikely that subsequent efforts to establish a non-fee-for-service system would have prevailed. He would probably have looked with misgiving on some moves begun in the late 80s to reintroduce another kind of 'marketplace' into a service which he always hoped would remove all financial impediments to satisfactory care - on the frail assumption that the Exchequer could invariably be persuaded to provide enough money.

A landmark in Fox's early years as editor was the publication of the Collings Report (The Lancet 1950;i:555-85) which illustrated, through the eyes of an Australian visitor, the imperfections of general practice in Britain. Hopes that the NHS would speedily improve matters proved vain, but the coming of the College of General Practitioners - in which Fox had a hand - and the growing appreciation of the importance of primary care fostered by his journal, eventually raised the standards and status of general practice from the level of a retreat for the unambitious graduate or the failed specialist. In 1961 he recognized the significance of the Christ Church conference on postgraduate medical education and he published George Pickering's commentary [Munk's Roll, Vol.VII, p.464] on its conclusions, thereby hastening the emergence of a more active on-going medical education. Fox had a talent for grasping the essential achievements and failures of health care in other lands. Short visits to the Soviet Union (1954), China (1957), the United States (1960) and Australia and New Zealand (1963) were cues for penetrating articles on what had been achieved and what was lacking in the health systems of these countries. Despite the mass of fact and observation with which he had to grapple, he made these commentaries illuminating and entertaining. Outstanding among his other signed contributions to the journal was his 1965 Harveian Oration entitled 'Purposes of Medicine'. Here he declared again that the primary role of doctors was to help people rather than to advance science, and he maintained that they should not prolong life against the patient's interest: 'I do not believe that confidence in our profession depends on following rules at the expense of people.' Another passage reads poignantly today in the shadow of events in many tormented parts of the world where doctors have been victimized because their actions were seen as contrary to the will of those in power: 'In principle ... nations allow that Medicine has a more advanced code than their own - that the doctor is right to put his duty to the human race before his duty to any of its component groups ... However uncertain and tentative, he is a prototype of supranational man.' One of his earlier pieces, 'The Greater Medical Profession' (The Lancet 1956;ii:779-80) has also been much quoted. He wrote of the medical empire transforming itself into a commonwealth with more and more of its colonies and dominions becoming wholly or partly independent. He helped many readers to recognize that medicine should be seen as only one member in a family of professions, among whom cooperation rather than financial competition was vital to the success of any health service. With all these thoughtful and elegant texts, and with many more, Fox enlivened the pages of his journal and compelled his readers to think about what they and their colleagues were doing both individually and in their corporate actions. At the same time, over the years, he encompassed the daily tasks of an editor upon whose desk papers and letters fell in mounting numbers as medicine became ever more scientific in the surge of genetics, immunology, and molecular biology clamouring for places in a general journal. In his time The Lancet sought advice from outside advisers on submitted papers much less often than it came to do in later years. Fox's Heath Clark lectures of 1963 - published as a book, Crisis in Communication, London, The Athlone Press, 1965 - had this to say about the refereeing of papers: 'By enlarging the editorial group, so as to dilute the influence of personal prejudice, one inevitably reduces the chances of the unorthodox. Referees are on the whole conservative and the more referees look at the paper the less the journal is likely to take a risk. An independent editor may often have golden dreams that a horse he has backed will come romping home at 45 to 1; but an editorial committee seldom sees its duties in a sporting light.' Those editors with sporting instincts were warned, however, by his next remark: '... my impression is that, in the journal I work for, the worse mistakes of the past four decades have been errors of acceptance rather than rejection.' One of his successors as editor has agreed with this view although he pointed out that mistakes of commission were almost always rapidly exposed while those of omission could remain hidden for a long time. When Fox retired from the editorship he became director of the Family Planning Association. This work strengthened his views on population control and stimulated another vivid lecture, 'Noah's New Flood' (The Lancet 1966;ii:1238), in which he argued that Britain, like any other country, should have a population policy. After he left the FPA in 1967 he seldom wrote again for publication, though he did emerge to reiterate his opinion that industrial action by doctors was a mistake (The Lancet 1976;ii:892). He kept in touch with a mass of friends by letter and by his famous hand-painted Christmas cards. He became a knight in 1962, having declined the honour earlier because he feared his acce

8-Prof. Percy Stafford Allen<sup>7</sup> was born on 7 Jul 1869 in 2 Twickenham Park, Twickenham, London, died on 16 Jun 1933 in Oxford, Oxfordshire at age 63, and was buried on 20 Jun 1933 in Corpus Christi chapel, Oxford.

General Notes: Allen, Percy Stafford (1869–1933), Erasmian scholar, was born at 2 Twickenham Park, Twickenham, Middlesex, on 7 July 1869, the younger son and fourth child of Joseph A. Allen (1825–1910), a London bill broker. The Allens were a distinguished and old-established Quaker family, but Joseph Allen had been obliged to leave the Society of Friends on marrying 'out' to Mary Mason (d. 1892), youngest daughter of Hans David Christopher Satow and sister of the Anglican diplomat and historian Sir E. M. Satow. Percy Allen was educated at Clifton College (1882–8) and at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, where he was a scholar (1888–92), taking a first class in classical moderations (1890) and a second in literae humaniores (1892).

In 1884 Allen had accompanied his father on a visit to Gibraltar, Morocco, and Malta for the Anti-Slavery Society; in 1893 he travelled with a pupil in Australia and New Zealand. After returning to

In 1884 Allen had accompanied his father on a visit to Gibraltar, Morocco, and Malta for the Anti-Slavery Society; in 1893 he travelled with a pupil in Australia and New Zealand. After returning to Oxford at the end of that year, he won the chancellor's prize for a Latin essay (on the character of Alcibiades) in the summer of 1894. In 1896 he took his MA and became a master at Magdalen College School. Appointed professor of history in the government college at Lahore in 1897, he visited England in the summer of 1898, to marry on 20 September his cousin Helen Mary (1872–1952), daughter of Arthur John and Agneta Allen, of Chislehurst, where Joseph Allen had built himself a house. They had one child, a daughter, who died at birth in 1906.

The climate of India seriously affected the health of both Allen and his wife, and in 1901 he resigned his Lahore professorship and returned to Oxford, where the rest of the Allens' life was spent. Initially they were supported by an annual £250 from Allen's father and by small earnings from minor academic and administrative chores; the death of Joseph Allen in 1910 relieved financial pressure. In 1906 a project to make Allen a research fellow of Corpus Christi failed, but in 1908 he was elected to a fellowship of Merton College, which he held until 1924, becoming an honorary fellow in 1925. He filled various college offices, notably that of librarian (1915–24), bringing order into the college archives and early holdings, as well as publishing Merton Muniments, a facsimile and edition of some of its earliest documents, with his friend H. W. Garrod in 1928 and having a large part in similar publications by others. The fellowship carried no teaching duties, but for many years Allen continued the lectures he had first given in 1906 on the tradition of the classics. In 1924 he was elected president of Corpus Christi College; he retained this office until his death.

Allen's name will always be associated with his masterly edition of the correspondence of Erasmus, Opus epistolarum Des. Erasmi Roterodami. His interest in Erasmus dated from 1892 when, immediately after taking his first degree, he competed unsuccessfully for the chancellor's English essay prize. The subject was Erasmus. In 1893–4 he attended the lectures on the life and letters of Erasmus by James Anthony Froude, who influenced him profoundly: he always maintained that The Life and Letters (1894) was better than any other book on Erasmus, and on the day on which Froude died he began to read his History of England, which he would never willingly hear disparaged. Allen's first published book was Selections from the Writings of James Anthony Froude (1901). His virtually flawless scholarship and his gentle, impartial temper make his admiration for Froude seem paradoxical. But he was a man incapable of paradox and, on the main issues of the Reformation, he believed Froude to have been right.

During his four years in India, Erasmus's correspondence continuously preoccupied Allen. On 22 June 1901 he and his wife were cutting up earlier printings of the letters to form, along with the extensive collections he had made in the Netherlands and Germany between 1893 and 1896, a basis for a new edition. After the Allens' return to Oxford in 1901 they regularly (the 1914–18 war years excepted) spent spring and summer in European libraries, collating the known material and bringing to light an immense amount of material hitherto unknown. They were aided in 1904 by a small private gift, part of which was spent on a typewriter, and later by modest financial support from the Clarendon Press, which also intervened to allay anxieties about putative rivals. Every letter was copied fair in the library where the manuscript (or the first printed text) was to be found. The copy so made became the 'printer's copy', with no intervening transcript. The proof of each letter was corrected in the library where the original copy had been made. In the decipherment of difficult fifteenth- and sixteenth-century hands Allen had no rival. Nobody knew the texts of the Reformation as well as he; to nobody were the lives of the great and little men of the Reformation so intimately familiar; he knew them and their writings, and anything that anybody else had written about them, at first hand. Ingram Bywater called him 'the most learned man in Oxford' (DNB), and the Opus epistolarum is one of the great monuments of English learning.

The first volume in this first critical edition of Erasmus's correspondence appeared in 1906, and the eighth was published posthumously in 1934, with Allen's portrait for a frontispiece and his life by Garrod, in Latin, by way of introduction. Allen had left it to his wife, his collaborator since the beginning, and to Garrod to complete the last three volumes; for these he had collected the materials, but without furnishing commentary and introductions. Volumes 9–11 appeared between 1938 and 1947; an index compiled by Barbara Flower, completed and edited by Elisabeth Rosenbaum, was published as volume 12 in 1958. Reissued in the 1960s and reprinted entire in 1992, the edition still holds the field unchallenged for accuracy and comprehensiveness. Text apart, 'Allen' is, in its commentary and introductions, 'a treasure-house of unborrowed learning' (DNB), the beginning of a new era in Erasmus scholarship, in which Erasmus is presented, in his own words, fully but sparely and impartially.

Moral and historical judgement is left to the reader, who is deemed to share the familiarity of Allen with language, persons, and issues, as well as his affection for Erasmus and his appreciation of Erasmus's situation. The most important single printed source for the intellectual history of western Europe during pre-Reformation and Reformation times, the Opus epistolarum contains more than 3100 letters, 1600 of them by Erasmus himself, as against the 1800 in total printed by Jean Leclerc in 1706. Its texts are based almost entirely on known manuscripts, where Leclerc had often to rely on printed texts. Its datings, on which Erasmus chronology often depends, have stood the test of time remarkably: only a handful of finished letters, with a number of drafts, have since come to light. Its commentary (Leclerc had effectively none), though inevitably now dated, is still indispensable. 'Allen' is the starting point for the correspondence, and for much else, in the edition of the complete works of Erasmus in English issued by Toronto University Press (1974–) and for Toronto's companion biographical register, Contemporaries of Erasmus (1985–7), while in the Amsterdam edition of the complete works in Latin, also in progress, the correspondence has been judged less in need of immediate attention because of 'Allen'.

Besides the Opus epistolarum, Allen published his prize essay (1894), some single lectures, a little volume of Selections from Erasmus (1908), and eleven lectures in The Age of Erasmus (1914). In 1924 he and his wife published jointly Sir Thomas More: Selections from his English Writings and from the Lives by Erasmus and Roper (presenting a view of More which, like their view of Erasmus, was somewhat sentimental); and in 1929 they edited the Letters of Richard Fox, 1486–1527, the correspondence of the founder of Corpus. In 1934 there appeared posthumously another volume of Erasmian studies by Allen, Erasmus: Lectures and Wayfaring Sketches. One of his services to scholarship was the suggestion to the department of printed books in the British Museum that they should produce a series of short-title catalogues of books published before 1600 in France, Italy, Spain, the Low Countries, and Germany. The first such to be published, of French books, appeared in 1924.

Allen received honorary degrees from the universities of Leiden (1922), Birmingham and Louvain (1927), and Durham (1931); between 1909 and 1930 he became, by invitation, foreign, honorary, or extraordinary member of academies or learned societies in Amsterdam, Antwerp, Ghent, Leiden, and Utrecht; in 1923 he was elected fellow of the British Academy. In 1925 his sense of what was required of the head of a college led him to take his DLitt at Oxford.

Allen was himself an indefatigable letter writer: he wrote easily and copiously, in a minute and precise hand, to family and friends and was prompt in dealing with official correspondence. To Sir Aurel Stein, his closest friend since their meeting at Lahore, he wrote weekly until Stein begged him to write only fortnightly. The selection of letters published in 1939 by Mrs Allen exhibits happily a single-minded scholar of simple tastes, regular habits, personal modesty, care for his friends, and devotion to Erasmus, his works, and his ideals—Allen was a supporter of the League of Nations—a man of moral principle and lovable and saintly character. They give only a superficial impression of his presidency of Corpus Christi, election to which the Allens privately called 'the miracle'. The election process was protracted, and Allen's eventual appointment was controversial among both undergraduates and influential fellows. He was well-meaning and conscientious, but he had neither taste nor aptitude for debate or for university administration. To individual undergraduates he was kind, presenting them all with his edition of the letters written by the founder, Bishop Fox. Yet he and his wife seemed remote and unworldly, entertainments at the lodgings were stiff and for some even painful, and there were embarrassing disciplinary problems. There could be no question, however, that Allen's devotion to the college rested upon a deep knowledge of its origins, and his Times obituarist thought that on scholarly grounds he was 'almost the ideal Head of a House'.

Besides his Latin and Greek, Allen had excellent French and German and could converse in Italian, Spanish, Dutch, and Hindustani. Personally frugal though unobtrusively generous and considerate to others, he defined his recreations as foreign travel and bicycling; both were pursued with a degree of hardiness. In youth he had rowed for his college, and he remained supportive of its boat club. Tall and spare, upright and unhurried but unpompous in carriage as in all things, careful in dress, pale in complexion, he wore his dark hair cut short; like his small moustache it greyed in later life. His eyes were hazel and he habitually wore spectacles.

For thirty years Allen occupied seat S8 in Selden End of the Bodleian Library, of which he was a curator from 1913 and a benefactor; from 1915 to 1924 he was a curator of the Indian Institute. He died in the president's lodgings at Corpus Christi, after a protracted illness, on 16 June 1933. After a funeral service on 20 June he was cremated at Reading; his ashes were buried near the altar in Corpus Christi chapel, which, as an Anglican with doctrinal reservations, he believed should be the centre of college life. The P. S. Allen junior research fellowship in history at Corpus Christi was founded by a bequest from his widow. Her own contribution to their scholarly collaboration was acknowledged by several honours: she received honorary doctorates from the universities of Basel (1946) and Amsterdam (1948) and an honorary MA degree from Oxford (1932), and was elected an honorary fellow of St Hilda's College, Oxford (1944).

General Notes: FRS. FLS. English scientist and philanthropist who opposed slavery and engaged in schemes of social and penal improvement in early nineteenth century England. Features in the painting of The Anti-Slavery Society Convention, 1840, by Benjamin Robert Haydon

He became a partner in the Plough Court Pharmacy established by Silvanus and Timothy Bevan. When Timothy Bevan's son Joseph Gurney Bevan retired, Samuel Mildred took over and the business was styled Mildred & Allen, when William Allen joined the business. Luke Howard joined the business, though the partnership was dissolved in 1806. William became the dominant partner and through his marriage to Charlotte Hanbury, the Hanbury family took a controlling interest. Henceforth, the business was styled Allen & Hanburys.

Founded the Newington Academy for Girls.. in which he was helped by his neighbour, John William Freshfield.

Allen, William (1770–1843), philanthropist and scientist, was born on 29 August 1770 at Stewart Street, the Old Artillery Ground, Spitalfields, London, the eldest of the six sons of Job Allen (1734–1800) and his wife, Margaret Stafford (d. 1830). His father, a silk manufacturer, was a member of the Society of Friends. William Allen grew up, and remained, a committed Friend, and became a leading member of the Gracechurch Street meeting. After going to a Quaker boarding-school at Rochester for a brief period, he was employed in his father's business; but his interest in chemistry led him to enter J. G. Bevan's chemical establishment at Plough Court. On Bevan's retirement in 1795 he took over the business and opened a laboratory at Plaistow. He later formed a partnership with his second wife's two nephews (Messrs Allen and Hanbury). His position enabled him to make many scientific experiments, and he associated with like-minded friends, including the surgeon Astley Paston Cooper, in the Askesian Society. He gave lectures to his fellow members at Plough Court, and became a fellow of the Linnean Society in 1801 and of the Royal Society in 1807. He was appointed lecturer at Guy's Hospital in 1802, and lectured there until 1826. At the request of his friend Humphry Davy he also lectured at the Royal Institution.

Allen's interests, however, moved from science to philanthropy. He had been interested from childhood in the anti-slavery campaign; in 1794 Thomas Clarkson became his friend, and both he and Wilberforce remained close friends throughout Allen's life. On the abolition of the slave trade in 1807, Allen became an active member of the African Institution, and shared in the agitation for the abolition of black slavery in Sierra Leone and the West Indies. He was equally active in promoting education and was a member of the committee formed in 1808 for the support of Joseph Lancaster, the founder of the monitorial school at Borough Road, Southwark, which in 1814 became the British and Foreign School Society. Allen was its treasurer and steady supporter. Under his guidance, the committee paid Lancaster's debts, pruned the monitorial institution at Borough Road of extravagances, set up an enlarged committee to raise subscriptions, warded off the challenge of the Anglican National Society, and, after more extravagances and indiscretions, ousted Lancaster from control of the institution. Allen played a leading part in the production of the British Society's teaching manual and wrote the preface to Scripture Lessons (1820, based on extracts from the Bible), which was for many years the only permitted reading book in British Society schools. The controversy between Lancaster and Andrew Bell, mainly over their respective roles in monitorial education, was one of the topics of The Philanthropist, a quarterly journal which Allen started in 1811 and maintained until 1817, and in which many other social reforms were discussed. James Mill was his chief contributor, and their friendly relations were initially undisturbed by radical religious differences.

In 1814, Allen, with Jeremy Bentham, Robert Owen, and four other partners, bought the New Lanark mills from Owen's previous partners in order to establish a model industrial community. Differences arose over the issue of management; in 1824, Allen—who was alarmed by Owen's avowed atheism—succeeded in enforcing biblical instruction in the New Lanark schools, and in banning the teaching of singing, dancing, and drawing. Owen consequently withdrew from the management and gave up his partnership in 1829, though Allen retained his interest until 1835. Allen was generally admired but Owen considered him narrow-minded and 'a very bustling, meddling character' (Owen, 95, 141), though anxious to do good in his own way. He thought that familiarity with great men had turned the worthy Quaker's head. However unkind this conclusion may seem, it is undeniable that Allen was moving in exalted circles. The duke of Kent was interested in both Owen's and Lancaster's schemes, and served as chairman of the committee appointed to look into Lancaster's muddled affairs. His own financial situation had become embarrassed, and Allen undertook to act as trustee for his estates; the duke consented to live upon a fixed allowance until his debts were discharged. Allen continued to act until the duke's death and the final settlement of his affairs. When the allied sovereigns visited England in 1814, Alexander I of Russia was introduced to Allen as a model Quaker. The tsar attended a Quaker meeting and visited Friends' houses, and evidently regarded Allen with considerable respect and sympathy.

In August 1818 Allen left England on a tour: after travelling through Sweden and Finland to Russia, he visited Alexander at St Petersburg, then moved to Moscow and Odessa. He reached Constantinople in July 1819, and returned by the Greek islands, Italy, and France to England in February 1820. In 1822 he went to Vienna to see Alexander again, chiefly in a vain attempt to obtain a declaration from the powers that the slave trade should be piracy. The tsar and Quaker parted, after several interviews, with prayers and embraces. Allen made other journeys to the continent in 1816, 1832, and 1833, when he examined schools, prisons, and social institutions. In interviews with statesmen and rulers, including the crown prince of Prussia, the king of Bavaria, and the king and queen of Spain, he encouraged them to adopt his ideas for reforms. In Britain he took an interest in many philanthropic causes: he promoted schools and district visiting societies, and gave evidence on the education of the poor to two parliamentary select committees. He also campaigned for the abolition of capital punishment and the protection of the Greeks, corresponding with the duke of Wellington and other political leaders. In 1841 he was appointed president of the Pharmaceutical Society's council. His chief interest in later years was in an 'agricultural colony' with industrial schools, which he helped to found at Lindfield in Sussex, and which he frequently visited to superintend its working.

Allen married, in 1796, Mary Hamilton (b. 1771), who died ten months later; she left a daughter, who in 1822 married Cornelius Hanbury, and herself died in 1823 after the birth of a son. Allen married again in 1806; his second wife was Charlotte Hanbury (b. 1762), who died in 1816. In 1827 he married Grizell Birkbeck, née Hoare (b. 1757), who died in 1835. Allen himself died on 30 December 1843 at Lindfield, and was buried in the Quaker burial-ground, Stoke Newington.

General Notes: She was a Governess and in the mid 1960s was governess to Lady Diana Spencer (later the Princess of Wales), when Diana was a young child at Park House, Sandringham, Norfolk. Rosalind Coward in her biography of the Princess of Wales wrote "Like her older siblings, Diana was initially taught at home by a governess, Gertrude Allen, who had also taught her mother and other local children". Park House one might describe as the Dower house for Sandringham House but was no longer needed by the Royal family. Gertrude was not the only Allen connection between Park House and the Allen family, as, when Francis Allen of Cockley Cley Hall, Norfolk died in 1926, his widow, Dorothy Allen, sold the estate as the house anyway was too large for her needs. Park House was vacant at the time and so, when she applied to the Royal Authorities, they considered her a suitable person so leased it to her. About 5 years later, she was having tea with Lady Fermoy who mentioned they were looking for a house in the area. Dorothy had just got engaged again and said 'what about Park House as she would be leaving on marriage'. The Fermoys did take over the lease. They were maternal Grandparents of the future Princess of Wales and it was through them that the Spencers were in Park House.

General Notes: G'day again Charles

As you can see from the email below, Peter died in 1983 in Perwez. Given Belgian privacy laws, you won't get a death certificate without his son's say so, but an email from the Mayor's secretary is certainly good enough for the family tree.

Steven in London will now file an FOI request so hopefully Peter's SOE PF will be opened some time in the new year.

Thanks again for your help and wishing you all the best

David

General Notes: Edward Ransome Allen 75 G 12 1910 Stoke Newington. An Elder. Edward Ransome Allen bore two names honoured in the annals of the Society, but known far beyond its limits, and he bore them worthily. His great-grandfather, Job Allen, baptised 1734, silk-weaver of Steward Street, Spitalflelds, joined the Society, and married Margaret Stafford, whose grandfather, Walter Stafford, joined at a much earlier date. On his mother's side he was descended from Richard and Phoebe Ransom, of North Walsham, Norfolk, of whom, Richard was "convinced of truth" about 1676, and for some fifteen years suffered imprisonment for conscience' sake. From this worthy couple are descended the Ransoms of Hitchin, the elder branch, and the Ransomes of Ipswich. Edward R. Allen was born in 1841, at 7 Cowper Street, Finsbury, a house adjoining his father's business premises, being the second son of Stafford and Hannah Hunter Allen, better known amongst Friends as Hannah Stafford Allen. To the early training of such parentage as theirs he owed much that contributed to his useful career as citizen and Friend. The family moved from Cowper Street to Charles Square in 1845, and to Stoke Newington four or five years later, being amongst the pioneers in that great wave of migration from the business portions of the city of London which continued with ever increasing volume during the later decades of the nineteenth century. From infancy, therefore, E. R. Allen has been associated with London and Middlesex Quarterly Meeting, and, with the exception of a few years spent in schooldays at Folkestone and Bootham, and as an apprentice at Ipswich, has resided within the "compass' of Devonshire House Monthly Meeting. On his 23rd anniversary he was married to Ellen, second daughter of John Dawson and Ann Watlock, of Wandsworth, who survives him; they celebrated their Golden Wedding in 1914. All his life after his Ipswich apprenticeship, over fifty-five and a half years, he was associated with the business of Stafford Allen & Sons, of Cowper Street, drug grinders, now Stafford Allen & Sons, Ltd., manufacturing chemists, of which Company he was Chairman at the time of his decease, actively participating in its interests, it may be said of him that he was "not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Nevertheless he was no recluse, not allowing neither his business cares or his inner life to deter him from rational enjoyment of other pursuits and recreations. He was keen in his enjoyment of nature, and found to a large extent in his own country the fascination which "many seek beyond seas. Both rod and gun had their attraction, and he was a cyclist from the early days of the "boneshaker" until recent years, when a modern "free-wheel proved useful in the visitation of Meetings. His work for the Society extended over a long period, during which he gave valuable help to his Monthly and Quarterly Meetings, acting as Clerk of the latter for several years. In the engagements of Committees of these Meetings, for which he very frequently acted as clerk, as also in the administration of their Trusts and Trust Property, he took a very active share, one might say up to the last, being in consultation about some of them within two or three days of his decease. To all these, and to the consideration of the affairs of the Church, he brought a valuable business experience combined with a wise and cautious conservatism in days in which events move with a rapidity unknown to our forefathers. As an Overseer of many years' standing, he entered sympathetically into matters requiring judgment and delicate handling; qualifications invaluable in the discharge of the duties of Elder or Overseer. As an Elder of much experience his judgment was weighty, and he was fully conscious of the responsibility of the office. Thus has one more of the roll of good and honest men passed to his rest, leaving behind him the memory of a well-spent life. The Friend.

Pelham was born in Hampstead early in 1923.

He was educated at Ackworth and Matriculated in 1941. He was up at Christ Church for a year. In the summer of 1944, he married at Scunthorpe, Annis T Pilkington. He was a Flight Sergeant Pilot in the Royal Air Force Volunteer Reserve, 124 Baroda Squadron when he was killed near North Walsham on February 15th 1945. He is commemorated on Panel 6 at Manchester Crematorium. His mother wrote to the college on January 30th 1946.

The 177 casualties of the 1939-1945 War who were cremated in Manchester are commemorated on the memorial screen wall which stands in the 1939-1945 War Graves Plot, in nearby Manchester (Southern) Cemetery.

124 Baroda Squadron

From April to September 1939, 124 Squadron was allocated a squadron code but the squadron was not stood up. The squadron eventually reformed in 1941 as a fighter unit equipped with Spitfires stationed at RAF Castletown to provide air defence for Scapa Flow. It was then moved to RAF Biggin Hill operating several variants of the Spitfire on bomber escort and high altitude reconnaissance duties.

10-Courtenay Allen Latimer<sup>103</sup> was born on 9 Oct 1929 in Edmonton, London and died on 12 Sep 2011 in Woodbridge, Suffolk at age 81.

General Notes: The late journalist, Jeffrey Bernard, writing in The Spectator of the 14th June 1985, had this to say of "Corky" Latimer.

But after Derby Day you may imagine my shock, horror and the pallor of my tight-lipped face when I read that letter in last week's Spectator from Corky Latimer ticking me off for having written that our old school, the Nautical College Pangbourne, was 'awful' or 'ghastly'. Well, it was for me. Corky was, I believe, a cadet captain as opposed to a mere cadet so he had some privileges and he had the advantage of having a brain. With no rank and no brain until I was 16 everywhere but everywhere was awful and ghastly, and I include home. And Corky writing that four of our contemporaries are now admirals completely boggles my mind. I shudder to think that they might be any of the four boys who used to smoke cigarettes with me in the woods on Saturday afternoons and who had masturbation races in the dormitories. This could be very bad for a company like Cunard if it gets out. But we have survived, I suppose. That nutcase Ken Russell went to Pangbourne as did Beverley Cross the writer, who caned me once for reading a novel during prep. I remember it was Somerset Maugham. But my fondest memory of Pangbourne was getting 12 cuts for uttering a four-letter word beginning with F and it wasn't 'food'. It still makes me twitch to think about it. Sociologists will be surprised to know that it didn't do me any good. In fact it was probably that experience which makes me so rude to editors and policemen of all sorts. But, dear Corky, you shouldn't have implied that readers are not allowed to complain about me. They do all the time and make yourself at home in this respect at any time you like.

The Old Pangbournian Society in an obituary, were somewhat more circumspect.

"Courtenay Latimer (43-47) died suddenly on 12 September, 2011, aged 78.

Known as Corky, he enjoyed his time at the NCP and left Pangbourne to do his national service in the Army, writes Lionel Stephens. Commissioned into the Royal Army Service Corps, Courtenay hoped that his love of boats and his nautical background would enable him to join Water Transport. Instead he was sent to Berlin where he was put in charge of the Havel Water Base during the vital Berlin Airlift of 1948-49. Late in life he published a detailed account of this episode in a book facetiously titled "My Struggle with Joseph Stalin."

After national service Courtenay became a yacht broker working in the City of London and later from his home in Woodbridge. In 1959 he sailed to New Zealand with a dozen others in the 70ft Aberdeen Anzac motor fishing vessel. Years later, in 2004, he wrote an account of this unusual voyage in a memoir titled "Creeping Up On Auckland."

Courtenay had a fantastic memory for detail and was great company. He loved keeping in touch with events at the College and attended the OP Reunion lunch in Lavenham in 2007.

Noted events in his life were:

- He was educated at Nautical College Pangbourne in Pangbourne, Berkshire.

After her husband's death in 1946, Joan Williams went back to her family home in Suffolk to care for her mother. She returned to Leesburg when her mother died, and worked at Loudoun Hospital caring for premature babies. She was also active in other community activities, continuing her interest in Thomas Balch Library and in Oatlands Plantation, where she served as a docent for 24 years. Joan Williams died 27 September 2003."

Taken from the "Williams Family Papers 1819 - 1993" at the Thomas Balch Library, 208 West Market Street, Leesburg, VA 20176

Joan Williams came to town, made it her own. Many times people come into our lives and leave their mark. But it is not often that someone moves into a county and becomes a predominate part of its history. Joan Stafford Allen Williams was one of these people. Not only did she touch the lives of people with her good works and generosity, but she left her mark on Loudoun County's history by telling the story of Oatlands Plantation. On Sept. 27, Mrs. Williams, 96, retired nurse and a docent for the National Trust at Oatlands, died in her home in Leesburg of an aortic aneurysm. "Mrs. Williams was like a page in Oatlands history," said Oatlands Director of Education Belinda Thomas. "She was part of the house, part of the history of strong women at Oatlands, and she taught us that history can be entertaining." Through her lively ways and strong personality, Mrs. Williams became an attraction at Oatlands. People would come from across the country to tour Oatlands with her as their guide, and she received fan mail from those who had already experienced her grandeur. Not only did Mrs. Williams touch tourists' hearts, she touched the hearts of everyone who came in contact with her, especially her family.

She was an inspiration to her friends and a legend to the children and grandchildren," said Anthony Yelloly, a nephew who resides in England. "She had a clear vision of what was right and what was wrong," said stepgrandson Win Williams. "She instilled her beliefs without being pompous." Mrs. Williams was born April 3, 1907, in Long Melford, Suffolk, England. In 1937 she took a trip to Washington, D.C., and while on the boat she met Harrison Williams, a farmer, lawyer and author in Loudoun County. A year later the two were married in the chapel of the National Cathedral. Transplanting herself into her new life, Mrs. Williams threw herself into many activities. She became a member of the Goose Creek Friends Meeting in Lincoln, the Leesburg Garden Club, the Leesburg Book Club and the 24 Club. She was widely known for her work as a night nurse in the neonatal ward of the old Loudoun Memorial Hospital on Cornwall Street in Leesburg during the 1960s. She would knit hats for the newborns and come in on her days off to care for children, said Walter Devine, who grew up in Leesburg. "I was born premature at 6 1/2 months," said Devine. "Incubators had just come in, and I had to be fed four times a day through a feeding tube. It was very dangerous because if the tube and food got into the lungs, the baby would die.

"Mrs. Williams, or 'Wims' as I called her, was the only one who would feed me, so she even came in on her days off to feed me," he added. When the hospital moved to its present location at Lansdowne, Mrs. Williams stayed downtown and worked at the long-term care facility. She worked there until February of this year, only leaving after a minor stroke. "My grandmother always used to say, 'The problem with people today is they need a granny, someone to go to for advice'," said stepgranddaughter Constance de Bordenave. "She was a great listener. Sometimes her silence was heard more than her spoken voice." Up until the day she passed away, people were still going to visit and learn from her. "Whenever you were with her," said Devine, "you always left feeling better about yourself."

General Notes: Douglas Allen (1888-90) has responded gallantly to the call with two letters. The following extracts have been selected so as to avoid duplicating news which appears in them both. " I am astounded to look back and think it's nearly fifty years since I left the old School, and yet I'm full of go, and the old brain, though a bit soft at times, still functions. " We've had a very hot and damp summer here, with plenty to do as we had the British Fleet here for months-we made friends with lots of the personnel, officers and men--and a fine lot they are too. " Winter is now with us, cold and quite a lot of rain-I smile when I see the adverts ' Come to sunny Egypt'-it may be sunny at times, but it can be extremely cold after a hot clammy summer, and we do enjoy a fire in our sitting-room. " Out of business hours I am fairly well occupied with Y.M.C.A. here (an international affair and very interesting), Toc H among our own people, and also I am on the Scout executive. I do not do any strenuous work with the boys now, though I was one of the founders of the movement here in 1912, and the dear old Chief Scout gave me the Medal of Merit for my labours! However, it's better to do something than to sit by and grin. " One wonders what Egypt will be like in a few years' time now that Britain has withdrawn her hand from the plough! As an old resident here I can see wobbly furrows from now on. It's all very well to talk about self-determination of smaller nations, but let 'em learn to walk before they run." Allen finishes up by sending warm greetings to Old Scholars in the West of Scotland, where last year he was on a motor tour with his wife. Bootham magazine - April 1937

Douglas Allen (1888-90) received an M.B.E. in the King's Birthday Honours, in recognition of his social activities in Scouting, Toc H, and Y.M.C.A. work in Alexandria, in which he has been engaged for the past thirty years. He and a Church of England Chaplain started the Scout movement in Egypt in 1912. Bootham magazine - December 1939

DOUGLAS ALLEN Douglas Allen, who passed peacefully away in Egypt on June 20th, aged 76, was the youngest son of Edward Ransome and Ellen (nee Watlock) Allen. He was educated at Paradise House, Stoke Newington, and afterwards at Bootham, 1889-90. On leaving school he was for a short period with the family firm of Stafford Allen & Sons, spending the greater part of the time on its farm at Ampthill, Bedfordshire, where plants were grown in connection with the business. It was then that I first came to know Douglas Allen and a close friendship resulted. To my personal sorrow, in 1898 he accepted a position in Alexandria with the firm Allen, Alderson & Co. Since then he resided in or near Alexandria for the rest of his life, with periodic visits to England. In 1901 he married Margaret Louise Fry, of Ipswich, and they enjoyed a life of unbroken happiness. Douglas Allen was a man of high integrity and in every sense a true English gentleman. He took an active part in the social life of the community in which he lived, and was always glad to help in any good cause. Among other activities he started the local Boy Scout movement in 1912, and in 1939 he was awarded the M.B.E. He had a warm personality and a strong sense of humour, and will long be remembered by those among whom he lived. This was evidenced by the fact that nearly 300 people attended his funeral, representing at least 12 different nationalities. P. W. BROWN. Bootham magazine - June 1949

General Notes: Jane Bastin, 59 1 10mo. 1904 Rowlands Castle. Wife of E. Philp Bastin. Jane Bastin was the daughter of the late Stafford and Hannah Allen (nee Ransome), and was born at Hoxton, London, in 1845, before her parents' removal to Stoke Newington, with which meeting they were so long intimately associated. She was the eldest surviving daughter of a family of ten children, and her early life at home was a very busy and happy one. Like some others who have had careful religious home training, Jane Allen probably could not remember a time when she did not love and trust her Saviour. Hers was an active and energetic temperament, and at school she took real pleasure in her lessons, which she never felt to be burdensome. Her bright, cheerful disposition made her a favourite with her schoolfellows, with some of whom she maintained an intimate friendship during all her life. After leaving school, her mother's deafness made her part in the family life at Paradise Row, and afterwards at Church Street, Stoke Newington, both active and responsible. Her parents warmly welcomed the visits of friends travelling in the ministry, and a number of these from America as well as from various parts of our own country, were welcome guests of Stafford and Haimah Allen, and these came under her loving care. During these years of home her she took an active interest in her own Meeting, and was a willing helper in working meetings and other useful service, such as visiting the aged and infirm, on behalf of her dear mother, whose thoughts often went out in sympathy and love towards those who were in trouble or sorrow. She was one of the early workers at the Bedford Institute, to which she went on First-day mornings and sometimes during the week for some years. The interest which she took in her class of girls was warmly reciprocated, and was maintained, in some instances long after she had ceased to be a teacher. Her marriage to E. Philp Bastin took place at Stoke Newington, August 12th, 1869. The first few years of married life were spent at Victoria Grove near her own and her husband's parents, and within easy reach of meeting, and of a large circle of friends. After the birth of their first child. Jane Bastin passed through a long and severe illness, from which she was mercifully restored to her dear ones. Another child was born in 1872, and shortly afterwards the family removed to Uxbridge, in which tow'l and in the neighbouring village of West Drayton, many happy and eventful years were passed, as well as some anxious and sorrowful times. J. Bastin took much interest in the annual gatherings of Friends at Jordans Meeting-House, and enjoyed welcoming and entertaining them on their way to this lovely Buckinghamshire retreat. Many happy times of social intercourse were thus spent, which she greatly appreciated, and the meetings at Jordans were often times of true spiritual refreshment. It was soon after the annual gathering there in 1880, that her beloved mother, whilst on a visit at West Drayton, was called away to her heavenly home. During these years a meeting was held on Sunday evenings in a cottage at West Drayton in the endeavour to influence for good those who attended no other place of worship. Jane Bastin was seldom absent, whatever the weather, from the little gathering, which there is reason to believe was made a means of blessing to some. A weekly Bible reading was also held in her home, to which the neighbours were invited, and this was often felt to be a time of renewal of spiritial strength. Earlir in 1886, several of her children were prostrated by typhoid fever, and a protracted peiiod of anxiety followed. They were all mercifully restored to health except Allie, the eldest son, whose life so full of promise was thus cut short in his sixteenth year. The blow was a lieavy one indeed, and all that kind relatives and friends could think of was done to comfort the stricken hearts of the parents, but it was thought best not to return to West Drayton, and so a house was taken at Hammersmith. Later on they resided at Kingston-on-Thames for about ten years, and it -was during this period, perhaps more than at any other that she was able, being now freed from the cares of a yoing family, to enter fully into the social and religious life of the Meeting to which she belonged. On January 9th, 1899, she wrote: - "I have said many times, I have surrendered all that I have and am to my Lord; but during this past month, a fuller, deeper spiritual joy has come into my heart, and I know what I have longed to know, that this is a real accomplished fact, a definite covenant with my God, and the hymn commencing 'Thou sweet beloved will of God' is the language of my heart to-day." Shortly after settling at Kingston she commenced a 'Mothers' IMeeting; many of the attenders were the objects of her love and sym- pathy, and some of the friendships thus formed were only terminated by her death. Later on this 'Mothers' Meeting was merged in the Women's Adult School, which has become a flourishing and efficient organisation. The garden at her home, "Trevose," was an unfailing source of pleasure to her, and many Mere the summer gatherings to which she welcomed personal friends, and those in whom she was interested, for happy hours of social and religious enjoyment. She writes: - "Such a blessed promise is mine this week, Isaiah Iviii. verses 8 to 11; what a beautiful picture during these cool evenings which have followed so many sultry ones! how I have revelled in the sweetness and fragrance of my watered garden, ferns, roses and lilies bending their heads in joyful refreshment. The sweet patter of rain upon leaves outside conies as music. Oh the sweet refreshing of the heavenly dew." On two or three occasions she invited the young women from the Aerated Bread Company's establishment near Devonshire House, to spend an afternoon in a ramble on the banks of the Thames and amongst the attractions of Hampton Court Palace and grounds, with a pleasant, social and religious opportunity at Trevose before their return to London. She thus sought to show her appreciation of their efforts for the comfort of Friends during Yearly fleeting. She wrote: - "

It is joy beyond words to me to know that we are heirs together of the grace of life, and that our beloved children are under His own preparing hand for their work in His harvest field." The last three years of her life, 1901-1904, were spent at her new home "Trewetha" in the quiet village of Rowlands Castle, Hampshire, away from the noise and bustle of town life and amidst pleasant rural surroundings. Although she appeared to be enjoying fairly good health, and the more bracing atmosphere seemed to suit her, she did not feel able to take up much in the way of active work. Drawing room Bible readings were however held occasionally, and a quarterly tea meeting for the wives of the workmen in the Village Institute. She was also much interested in the village children and enjoyed having them iip to play in her garden. The training of girls for domestic service was a subject about which she thought a good deal, and she endeavoured to do what she could in this direction. Her loving sympathy was always extended towards the sad and suffering. Mothers with large families to provide for on slender incomes, were sure of her ready and patient attention, and of receiving the best help and advice which she could give. During the spring of 1903 and thenceforward, J. Bastin was consciovis of a steady but very gradual decrease of strength, evidenced principally by her shortened walks and by her avoiding the hills. She left home very seldom after this time, and attendance at Monthly and Quarterly Meetings, the holding of the Bible readings, and other gatherings of adults and children in the house and garden, which she had much enjoyed, had to be curtailed and subsequently given up altogether. But it was not until the early part of August, 1904, that serious alarm was felt, and she took to her bed on the 4th of the following month. From this time until the end she calmly and patiently bore the increasing weakness and weariness which nothing could remove, but which the loving care of those about her did the utmost possible to alleviate. She was still able at times to enjoy hearing portions of her favourite psalms and hymns, and she realised the presence of her Saviour, and that imderneath were the everlasting arms. All her children were present during one or more of the closing days, and solemn as were the moments spent with the dear one so near the hour of separation, they were indeed moments never to be forgotten, as loving messages and kind and thoughtful words were spoken to each one. On the day before the close, she was remarkably calm and peaceful, and it was difficult to believe that the end was near. She asked for each member of the household and bade them a loving farewell: just when evening set in, she sank into a deep slumber from which she did not awake. She entered into rest on the morning of October 1st, 1904. Oh! faithless heart, the same loved face transfigured Shall meet thee there, Less sad, less wistful, in immortal beauty Divinely fair. The mortal veil, washed pure with many weepings, Is rent away, And the great soul that sat within its prison Hath found the day.

Sweet as the tender fragrance that survives,

When martyred flowers breathe out their little lives;

Sweet as a song that once consoled our pain,

But never will be sung to us again,

Is thy remembrance. Now the hour of rest

Hath come to thee '97sleep, darling, it is best.

General Notes: CHUNGKING, CHINA. WILFRID A. MAW (1888-91), tells us of a tiger that recently made its appearance in his neighbourhood and killed four men and a girl. A curious fact in connection with the incident was that no native would give information to the British Consul as to the whereabouts of the beast as their priests had convinced them that it was a god! Wilfrid Maw goes on to tell us that " there is a local daily paper published by a Jap whose chief object is to set the Chinese against all foreigners (especially English) except Japanese. The latest sensation which set all Chungking and this half of the province in a ferment was the announcement of the English occupation of the Yangtse Valley and that a huge British force was coming up the river from Ichang with no end of warships. We were fortunate to escape a serious riot, as the report had reached us that all the Church members, a few hundreds, would be spared, but the rest of the population, 300,000 or so, wiped out! "Wilfrid Maw is acting as treasurer of the mission, an occupation that, as those who remember him at Bootham will know, must suit his mathematical abilities well, more especially as he has some six or seven different native currencies to take into account! But besides this he has charge of the boys' primary school, takes both English and Latin classes, hunts butterflies, and has studied sufficiently to enable him to pass three half-yearly examinations in the past year! Truly the life of a missionary is none too easy a one, and who shall say that the Alma Mater is not honoured indeed by those of her sons that undertake it?

General Notes: A long and interesting letter from G. W. MAW (1899-1902) from Nagpur must be heavily scissored, in the manner of film production. He writes: "I have been sending home lots of newspaper cuttings giving long descriptions of the M.C.C. tour to my boys. Hugh, the youngest, hoped that I would ask C. K. Naidu to get the autographs of all the M.C.C. players. I am afraid I found the request rather embarrassing. I met C. K. Naidu rather more than a year ago, as he is an old student of Hislop College, and he was the lion of the season just about the time the College held its Annual Social Gathering, soon after Naidu's return from England. . . . " I have now been living for over six months in my third place of residence since returning to Nagpur fourteen months ago. To start of f with I shared a bungalow with one of the Church of Scotland missionaries, and then moved back to the bungalow on the Friends' Hostel compound. . . . The bungalow is an enormous barn of a place, built in the old spacious days when things were cheap and labour cost almost nothing. It is uncomfortably large according to modern missionary ideas, and there are not many missionaries nowadays who would not gladly exchange for something smaller and easier to manage, and not so far away from the people in more senses than one. I lived there through the hot weather, as that was the place provided for me by the Scottish Mission. But during the hot weather, in a very remarkable way, details of which I have no time to tell, I was led to the small house in the city which I now occupy. If you were to see a photograph of the house without any means of judging its scale you might think that I had gone into a still more palatial residence, as the house is a two-storey building, with a space under the roof that can be used as a storage place for lumber. But the rooms are really so low that neither up nor down stairs is there very much clearance for my head. In fact, in my office, which is the only room downstairs (not counting the front veranda), which by means of bamboo curtains I turn into a sitting-room if I have visitors, I can actually touch one of the beams with my head when I am standing under it. I am over 6 ft, when I have shoes on, but my highest door is 5 ft. 6 in., while the lowest is just half an inch less than 4 ft., and that is a door that I go through quite frequently.... The house is situated within twenty yards of a main street, on the other side of which is the big Government Hospital.... My immediate neighbours are blacksmiths, washermen, fishermen, and poUce. . . . " But in spite of it all .. . I have had a very happy six months here. I am on very good terms with all my neighbours. The next-door children, several of whom have not yet reached the stage when clothes are considered necessary for either sex, come wandering freely in and out of my house at almost any time of the day. In fact, almost every day, when I am doing something which I really must concentrate on, I have to put the chain on the courtyard door to keep them out. But they are a jolly, lively little crowd, and I can forgive them a lot, even when they come and pull up some of the most precious things in my garden, which has been a great joy to them." General Notes: He was educated at Bootham School from 1863 to 1868 in York. He worked as an Engineer. In 1870 his eldest brother, Samuel Stafford, died from consumption in Egypt. Later that same year he and his father, Stafford, went out to Egypt to inspect the company 'Allen, Alderson & Co.' in Alexandria, Egypt. They had their English office in 7 Cowper Street, London (where 'Stafford Allen & Sons' operated from). It was agreed that Francis should take over the role of his late brother. Francis then specialised in the heavy engineering business such as dredging and irrigation equipment and narrow gauge railway trains for use in the Nile Delta cotton fields and built up the business to be "among the most prosperous in Alexandria". He started several subsidiary companies and also bought from the Egyptian Government the Khedivial Mail Line, which was one of the main shipping lines out of Egypt, including bonded warehouses, workshops, etc. The shipping company was later was taken over by P. & O. Line. Francis was also interested in Egyptian archaeology and at least once financially helped Howard Carter, who discovered the Tomb of Tutankhamen. He was appointed one of the 3 Deputy Lieutenants for Norfolk for 1926 (see London Gazette of 17.Nov. 1925) but later sadly had to stand down when he became seriously ill and later died. Recreation:- He loved shooting, which, as well as being a suitable house for his family, is why he bought the Cockley Cley estate, and fishing, especially when he was shooting there with his two younger brothers - John Archibald Allen and Alfred Henry

Date of birth: 3rd May 1890 Date of death: 3rd October 1915

Archibald Stafford Allen was born at Enfield in Middlesex on the 3rd of May 1890 the only son of John Archibald Allen, a publisher, and Elizabeth Mary (nee Smee) Allen of "Wynnstow", Limpsfield in Surrey. He left Hazelwood School in the spring of 1904 for Wellington College where he was in the Stanley from 1904 to 1908. He had intended to go on to Pembroke College Cambridge, but his father's ill health prevented this, and, instead, he went straight into business. "Although this was a great disappointment to him, he bore it with his usual cheerfulness". He devoted much of his spare time to a boys club in Walworth which he had started for poor boys.

On the on the 28th of April 1909 he enlisted as Private C/406 in the Inns of Court Officer Training Corps and served with them for four years, during which time he was learning the printing trade. Following the outbreak of war he was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the 8th Battalion Royal Fusiliers on the 12th of September 1914 and was promoted to Lieutenant on the 20th of January 1915. On the 15th of May 1915 he was married to Florence Mary (nee Hammond) at St Mark's Church Walworth and he embarked for France on the 1st of June 1915.

He was commended by 36th Brigade to 12th Division for the "good work" he had done during a German bombardment on the 9th of August 1915.

On the 3rd of October 1915 the battalion were holding a trench at Vermelles near Loos. The battalion war diary takes up the story:- "In trenches, heavily shelled all day but considering volume of shelling, casualties were fairly small. A digging party ordered to dig a trench from H 13 C 09 directly south for 700 yards. We were unable to do this as our own guns were heavily shelling this bit of ground. Trench marked out but two men killed in doing so; Lt Allen killed instantly by a shell and buried together with Lt Gullick (Lieutenant Arthur Louis Gullick of Pirbright in Surrey) of the 6th Buffs who was killed in reconnaissance outside German wire and brought in by our men at G17 B36. A very good young officer and much missed. Other casualties, 9 men killed and 9 men wounded, mainly by shell fire. In evening, about 10pm 200 men at work on new trench".

He was mentioned in Field Marshall Sir John French's dispatches of the 1st of January 1916 "for gallant and distinguished service in the field" His Colonel wrote:-

"I wish his friends to know the pride we all had for him. Others who knew him would like to hear how he was loved by one and all, what a gallant boy he was, and how he maintained the name of the grand regiment to which we all have the honour to belong. A braver and more gallant boy I have never seen; we all loved him and his men simply adored him.....it was with difficulty we could get him to rest."

He was buried, along with Lieutenant Gullick, behind the trenches at the junction of the Hulluch-Vermelles and Loos-La Bassee roads; his body was later re-interred.

He is commemorated on the war memorial at Wellington College.

Killed in action aged 25

Buried at Philosophe British Cemetery Mazingarbe Plot III Row N Grave 1A" (from Hazelwood School, War Memorial).

Allen (1897-99) have won the gold medal at the Wolverhampton Model Housing Exhibition for the best £200 cottage as well as the gold medal and prize for the best house in the Exhibition (without limitation as to price). *Bootham School Magazine - October 1908*ALLEN.— On 13th October, 1964, Ernest Gladstone Allen (1897-99), aged 82 years.

On October 13th, 1964, at the age of 82, Ernest Gladstone Allen died in hospital—he had been at Bootham from 1897 to 1899 and was the son of Alfred Henry Allen, 1868-70. A distinguished career as an architect and town planner led to his serving as President of the Town Planning Institute from 1936 to 1937. Between 1905 and 1914 Ernest Allen worked in partnership with George Pepler and together they won a number of medals for schemes of model housing estates. After George Pepler left to take up the position of Town Planning Inspector with the Local Government Board, Ernest Allen continued his work in partnership, first with Longstreth Thompson and later with Alfred Potter. Much of the work done was concerned with local authority housing schemes. He continued his architectural work until his death. With hobbies of cricket, tennis and gardening and a long term of service on his local parish and rural councils, he became Chairman of Godstone R.D.C. from 1943 to 1947. Ernest Allen lived a full and valuable life. We extend our sympathy tto Mrs. Allen.

He worked as a truly general ear, nose, and throat surgeon, bringing the evolving specialty to his patients, who admired him. Among colleagues he was respected for his hard work, humour, and principles. He was an active member of the Royal Society of Medicine's ENT division.

He contracted polio in 1953 but made a near complete recovery. After retiring in 1979, he continued to sail at the Blackwater Sailing Club, and he took up woodcarving and fly fishing. He travelled to Australasia and Europe, enjoying many NADFAS (National Association of Decorative and Fine Arts Societies) tours. He leaves a wife, Jill; two sons; and a daughter.

Christopher Savage was a consultant ENT surgeon at the Chelmsford and Essex Hospital, and the Southend General Hospital, where he developed a special interest in microsurgery of the ear. Born in Edgbaston, Birmingham, on 21 November 1915, he was part of the third generation of a family of surgeons. His father, Ernest Smallwood Savage, who gained his FRCS in 1896, was a gynaecologist at Birmingham and Wolverhampton. His grandfather, Thomas Savage, who was awarded the FRCS in 1869, was a professor of gynaecology in Birmingham. Christopher Savage's mother Constance was a housewife.

Savage was educated at West House School, Edgbaston, Marlborough College, Gonville and Caius, Cambridge, and then the London Hospital. He managed to do his pre-registration house jobs at the Haymeads Hospital, Bishop's Stortford, before serving as a surgeon lieutenant in the Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve on HMS Havelock on the North Atlantic convoys.

At the end of the Second World War he became a supernumerary registrar at the London Hospital, during which time he gained experience in general surgery and otolaryngology with Charles Keogh, Alan Bowen Davies and Johan Lindahl. Their influence led him to become first assistant to the aural department at the London from 1948 to 1952. He contracted polio in 1953, but fortunately made a near complete recovery.

In 1949 he was appointed to his first consultant post, in Chelmsford, and, in 1953, he was also made a consultant at Southend. Among his consultant colleagues he was respected for his hard work, humour and principles.

He retired in April 1979. He continued to sail at the Blackwater Sailing Club and took up woodcarving and fly fishing. He died from pneumonia on 10 December 2007 at the age of 92. He was survived by his wife Jill née Dawe, whom he married in April 1951, and his three children. His sons James and Robert have continued the family tradition, becoming a general practitioner and a consultant orthopaedic surgeon respectively. His daughter became a physiotherapist. Three of his seven grandchildren have also become doctors.

General Notes: JP. Pro-Vice Chancellor Birmingham Univesity. Francis Corder Clayton was born in Kelvedon, Essex, in 1843 and came to Birmingham as a young man to work in the chemical manufacturing industry for J. & E. Sturge in Wheeley's Lane. In the 1881 Census he is recorded as living at 18 St James's Road in Edgbaston with his widowed mother Emmaretta. In 1882 he successfully stood as a Liberal for Rotton Park Ward and subsequently served for many years on the Finance and Water Committees. He was Mayor from 1889 to 1890, during which time the Elan Valley water supply scheme was inaugurated and the city boundaries were extended. By the time he was granted the Freedom of the City in 1912 he had served on the council for 30 years. "FRANCIS CORDER, born 1843, at Kelvedon, Essex. Educated at Epping, at Hertford (four months only) and Bootham. I served a five years' apprenticeship to Harvey and Reynolds, chemists, at Leeds. Was. then for a year in London, passing the Pharmaceutical Society's major 'examination, followed by a year at a wholesale drug warehouse. I came to Birmingham in 1867 as chemist to John and Edmund Sturge, manufacturing chemists, and two years later became a partner in the firm, from which I retired in 1887. Details of my engagements in the public life of the City are to be found in the Bootham School Register, published in 1915. I am a J.P. for the City and Pro-Vice-Chancellor of the University. Francis Corder Clayton becomes an Honorary Freeman of Birmingham. On July 2nd the Birmingham City Council resolved to confer the honorary freedom of the City upon an Old Scholar, Francis Corder Clayton, (1855-8) and the interesting ceremony of presenting the illuminated copy of the resolution, and a casket to contain it, to the new Freeman, took place at the Council House on November 6th. The Lord Mayor (Alderman Bowater) in making the presentation referred to the reasons which had led the Council to confer upon Alderman Clayton "the greatest honour in their power." (We are indebted for the following report of the -speeches to the account of the proceedings in the "Birmingham Post.") "The greatest care was exercised that the freemen should be only those who had rendered eminent services to the city. " "Your public work, " the Lord Mayor continued, turning to Alderman Clayton, "entitles you to take a prominent place among our freemen." "Coming to Birmingham in 1867, when you were 24 years of age, you soon made for yourself a high position in com- merce, and had such financial success that twenty-five years ago you retired from business, and you have since devoted all your time to civic service. I say all your time because by remaining single you have more spare time than a man with the cares of a family. One is not surprised at your being a bachelor. What else could be expected from one whose youthful playthings and hobbies were differential cal-culus, integral calculus, trigonometry, and conic sections?" Proceeding, the Lord Mayor spoke of the youngest freeman's genius for finance. There was not time to enumerate all the public objects that had had the advantage of Alderman Clayton's energetic support, but he would mention a few. From 1877, for eleven years, he was a Poor-law Guardian, and took an active part in establishing the Marston Green Homes, so that a certain class of children should not start life with the label "Workhouse. "He had been at one time chairman of the committee, and helped to star t the institution on its successful career. In 1882 Alderman Clayton entered the City Council, and at once joined the Finance and Public Works Committees. He was appointed chairman of the Finance Committee in 1886, and had held that office ever since, except for the two years he was Mayor. During that period, in spite of the saying "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," he had borrowed ^,13,681,000 in loans, bearing a rate of interest, thanks to his ability, which compared favourably with that paid upon most municipal loans in the country. Also, during that time, the Finance Committee had passed for pay- ments accounts of the several committees amounting to over ^ 2 5,000,000. Having alluded to the events, including a Royal visit, which made Alderman Clayton's mayoralty in 1889 and 1890 notable, the Lord Mayor spoke appreciatively of his services to the University, remarking that his contributions to the funds, and the presentation by him of the artistic statue of the late King Edward, were evidences of his generosity. Alderman Clayton's work outside the Council and the University, he added, had been most extensive, and it would be easter to mention the very few public societies he had not assisted than the great number he had helped. "In conclusion," said his lordship to Alderman Clayton, "because you are a representative of all that is best in the active public life of Birmingham, and have given ungrudgingly of your time and energy to the common interests of your fellow citizens, on their behalf I offer you the right hand of fellowship, and admit you as an honorary freeman of this city. " (Loud applause.) The Lord Mayor here shook hands with the new freeman, and passed on to him the handsomely illuminated scroll and the casket, which he remarked was a splendid piece of Birmingham workmanship. The casket is an excellent example of silversmith work, having been fashioned entirely by hand. The body is divided into panels with representations of Truth, Justice, Mercy, and a figure symbolising Progress. These are all in low relief repousse. A panel in the centre of the body bears a representation of the Birmingham University, also in low relief repousse. The plinth is decorated with crystals at intervals, set in the antique style. Round the margin of the cover is the super- scription in raised letters. Within this there is debate fluting having for its centre a representation of the city in low relief. Having signed the roll, Alderman Clayton rose to reply, and was received with applause. He said it was a proud moment in his life when, four months previously, he was admitted an honorary freeman of the city, but when he looked at the distinguished names on the roll he felt prouder still. He thanked his colleagues for the great honour they had done him; for of all honours, there was none to be compared with that of being appreciated by those with whom he had been associated so long. It was nearly forty-six years since he settled in Birmingham. Ten years later he entered public life as a member of the Board of Guardians. Very different was the way of an election to that body in those days. In consequence of what had taken place a few years previously it was agreed that the Board of sixty members should consist of forty liberals and twenty conservatives. A select few sat round a table a month before the day of election, and after respecting vested interests in the shape of old members, they arranged the additional names to be elected by undertaking to get sufficient voting papers filled up on their behalf. That was delightfully simple, but the by-election at which he was first elected was simpler still. He was asked one January to serve when a vacancy occurred, and was elected in May, and the first he knew about it was a paragraph in the next morning's paper. Many had entered the City Council after an apprenticeship to public life as Guardians, and he believed it had been a good experience for those who had done so. They dealt in the Council chamber to so large an extent with impersonal matters that some knowledge of their poorer neighbours' surroundings had a beneficial influence on their work. He noted with satisfaction that the boundary work between the work of the Board of Guardians and the City Council was becoming more attenuated, and they might possibly at some future time see it all merged into one body. After five years' service as a Guardian he entered the Council, being opposed by a very pleasant gentleman, who desired to expose what he considered were the iniquities of the Liberal caucus of those days. That gentleman had large audiences, and he (Alderman Clayton) had a still larger number of votes, and both were satisfied. After three more elections, of which two were contested, he entered that haven of rest and happiness, the aldermanic bench. Since his first election to the Council over 200 new comers had followed him. For some few years he served on the Public Works and Gas Committees, but his lot had been cast principally with finance and water. As chairman of the Finance Committee for many years, he had endeavoured to steer a fair mean between parsimony on the one hand and a too-generous expenditure on the other. With the extended views of local government, particularly in those of health and education, it would be more and more difficult, he might say impossible, to keep rates from rising, so long as the present system of raising money for local expenditure remained unaltered. They had been looking for additional help from the Imperial Exchequer, but it never came. At present that contribution was only one-fifth of their expenditure. It would be a pleasant change when he was relieved from membership of the Finance Committee, and could go in for "improvements" as some of his colleagues did. He wanted to try the experiment some day to see what it was like. In May, when the time came for settling the rates for the year, the chairman of the Finance Committee had a bad fortnight. He found the requirements of the various committees much higher than he could recommend to the Council, and therefore he interviewed the various departments, only to find that the breadth of view, entertained by each as to their own requirements was very great. Still, the committees had helped him in the past to a considerable extent. The whole business, however, had grown too large for one person to tackle, and the new plan of a Consultative Committee, in which the proposals were brought before all the spending committees at the same time, giving a bird's eye view of the situation, had worked admirably. It was during his Mayoralty that the Welsh water scheme was approved by the Council, and he could only say now, what he said in its early stages, that there was no other course open to them. In fact that was the opinion of all who had carefully studied the subject. Unfortunately there was as yet no daylight on its future from a financial standpoint. It had been his privilege to be associated with several institutions in the city, and some of these had also had their financial trials. Amongst others, there was the Queen's Hospital, which he was glad to say had lived to see happier times. The University was having its trials at the present time, but he hoped they were now on the turn for the better. Whey could spend double as much money as they did, and advantageously, if they had the means. The field of original research was "white unto the harvest," but others were reaping because in Birmingham they had not had the means to sow. The Government were offering them ;£ 1,200 a year for original research in a specialised field, but owing to their poverty is providing their small share the scheme was delayed. He expressed regret that his colleague of so many year's standing, the late Alderman Beale, was not with them that afternoon, and in conclusion

- He worked as a Chartered Accountant of London & Croydon.
  - 8-Douglas Impey Clayton<sup>2,173</sup> was born in 1889 in London and died in 1960 at age 71.

General Notes: DOUGLAS IMPEY, born 1889, in London. Educated at M. M. C.'s School, and afterwards at boarding schools at Sandgate and Heacham. A severe accident at boarding school without medical treatment at the time seriously affected his subsequent health. This, with defective eyesight, has limited his choice of work. He has been trained as a typist; started for himself in 1907, and principally engaged in typing literary work.

Noted events in his life were:

• He worked as a Typist.

8-Maj. Patrick Andrew Clayton<sup>2,173</sup> was born on 16 Apr 1896 in Croydon, Surrey and died on 17 Mar 1962 at age 65.

He was the basis for the character of "Peter Madox" in "The English Patient". Clayton spent nearly 20 years with the Egyptian Survey department during the 1920s and 1930s extensively mapping large areas of previously unmapped desert. In 1931, Clayton was running triangulation from Wadi Halfa to Uweinat when he came across refugees fleeing from the Italian occupation of Kufra, via Uweinat and helped save many from death in the arid desert. Clayton had collaborated extensively with Ralph Bagnold in the preparation and mapping associated with Bagnold's pre-war exploration trips. He served in the British Army's Long Range Desert Group (LRDG) during World War II. At the Clayton spent nearly 20 years with the Egyptian Survey department during the 1920s and 1930s extensively mapping large areas of previously unmapped desert. In 1931, Clayton was running triangulation start of the war Clayton was a government surveyor in Tanganyika. Bagnold had him returned to Egypt because of his detailed knowledge of the Western Desert. He was commissioned into the Intelligence Corps. Clayton was leading "T" Patrol in a planned attack on Kufra when the patrol was engaged by the Italian Auto-Saharan Company on 31 January 1941, near Gebel Sherif. During the action Captain Clayton was wounded and his car damaged. He along with his colleagues was taken prisoner. He was moved to the Abruzzo region in Italy where he was visited by Laszlo Almasy after Almasy's spy mission, Operation Salaam, to transport two German spies across the Libyan desert to Cairo.

Noted events in his life were:

- He worked as a Surveyor & Soldier.
- He was awarded with DSO MBE.
  - 9-Maj. Peter Hollis Clayton was born on 14 Jun 1928 in Croydon, Surrey and died on 19 Jul 2011 at age 83.

General Notes: Peter Hollis Clayton was born in Croydon on 14 June 1928 to Patrick Andrew and Ethel (Ellie) Clayton, née Wyatt. Peter's father worked in Cairo for the Egyptian Desert Surveys Department and Ellie and Peter joined him there in August 1928. Patrick worked with Count Lászlo Almásy, and some believe he was the model for the character of Peter Madox in The English Patient. In 1938, with war threatening, Peter returned to England with his mother to continue his education, first at St Michael's, and then at Sevenoaks School, where he was a member of School House, played rugby and was a house captain and prefect. Conscripted into the Army in 1946, Peter was commissioned in 1948 into the Queen's Royal Regiment, stationed in Germany. He took on the role of Motor Transport Officer, experience that would be invaluable later in the desert. Keen to return to Arabia, he attended a three-month Arabic Language Course in late 1952 and a one-year course at the Middle East Centre for Arabic Studies in Lebanon in 1953. The Centre was widely believed to be a school for Western spies. Having qualified, Peter joined the Trucial Oman Levies in January 1954 as a squadron commander, where his adventurous spirit, fluent Arabic, army training and deep understanding of Arab culture made him an ideal recruit. Peter played a key role in evicting the Saudi insurgents and then commanded a joint Saudi/ Trucial Oman Levies police force patrolling the disputed oasis area. He was invested with the MBE in 1956 for his services. He was admired and respected by many local people and their leaders, and the ruler of Dubai asked him personally to establish the first Dubai police force. This Peter did, and the new service mustered at Naif on 1 June 1956, with 29 members. Today it is 15,000 strong. He also became a close, lifelong friend of Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al Nahyan, who later founded the United Arab Emirates. From 1971 to 1994 Peter was very active in the Middle East, using his contacts, knowledge of the area, and military experien
