3-James King<sup>1,4,5</sup> was born on 7 Apr 1718 in Newcastle upon Tyne, Northumberland and died on 27 Nov 1795 at age 77.

General Notes: We do have a note from research in the Guildhall Library in London that James possessed the lease of Salt Meadow Bottle & Glass House for 19 years from 11/11/1753. The house was closed in 1758 by agreement with other manufacturers. We also know that James and his son Joseph were in business in a firm called Richard Turner, Shortridge & Co based at Ouseburn with a Huguenot descendant called Joshua Henzell. We know this because the three were all declared bankrupt in 1786. There were many bankruptcies at this time triggered by the massive taxes being levied on glass which had reached some 40% of the total cost.

9-Julia Whitworth

Julia married Roger Carter. They had one son: Michael.

10-Michael Carter

9-Joan Whitworth was born in 1918 in Elleray, Windermere, Cumbria and died on 5 Jun 2014 in Furness Hospital, Barrow in Furness, Cumbria at age 96.

General Notes: She used to live at Spring Cottage, Skelwith Bridge, near Ambleside in Cumbria. She would conduct her physiotherapy sessions in the small Friend's Meeting House at Ambleside.

My parents and maternal grandparents knew both her and her own family very well.

My mother reminds me today 18 Sept 2011, that the Whitworths were a Quaker family from Lancashire. My grandmother Sally (Sarah Jane) Bulman (née Armstrong) and her sister Nance (Annie), went out to Switzerland on a ski-ing holiday as guests of the Whitworths back in the 1920s, when the Armstrong family were at Paddockwray and the The Woolpack Inn, in Eskdale.

As of 2011, Joan is in a small residential community in Windermere, where curiously, a near neighbour is Joan Holden, who used to live at Rossett, in Langdale and whom I knew well when I was a child because her son Graham was a childhood friend of mine.

THE former Ambleside physio-therapist and keen horticulturalist Joan Whitworth has died at the age of 95.

Joan, the youngest daughter of Major John Haworth Whitworth and his wife Ida Mary, was born at Elleray, Windermere, at the very end of the First World War -the year in which both her father and his younger brother were killed in the conflict.

She and her three elder sisters lived with their mother at Bowdon, Cheshire, and spent considerable time in Switzerland at Kandersteg and at Alassio in Italy.

From 1923, the family lived at Broad Ings, at the northern end of Windermere, and Joan attended Fairfield School in Ambleside before having governesses.

She later went to St Leonard's School in St Andrew's, following her mother and elder sisters, and became captain of house for sport in Bishophall West.

In 1932, the family moved to Highgate, London, and in 1938 north again to Disley, Cheshire, where Joan trained as a physiotherapist at Manchester Royal Hospital. She then went to work for two years at Leeds General Infirmary. After joining the Red Cross in 1944, she worked at hospitals in Naples and Ancona in Italy and at Bertesee in Austria. Following the end of the war, she worked in a convalescent home for officers at Belden near Klagenfurt, Austria. She returned to England and set up her own physiotherapy practice in Ambleside, which she ran for almost 30 years. When not working, Joan enjoyed fell walking and travel-ling - especially to Switlerland -along with photography and gardening. She was a lifelong Quaker and staunch supporter of Colthouse, the Meeting House where her parents had been married in 1913. When she moved to Gatesfield, the Quaker sheltered home in Windermere, she was able to keep up with many ex-patients and friends, and to continue her gardening activities at Holehird, the Lake District Horticultural Society's garden. She was also a keen supporter of the Lakeland Housing Trust, the Armit Library and the Lake Artists Exhibitions. Politically, she was a lifelong Liberal, as generations of her family had been before her. Joan's later years were clouded by a failing memory but she kept up her cheerful spirit and sense of humour to the end.

She died peacefully in hospital in Barrow-in-Furness on June 5 after a short illness.

Noted events in her life were:

- She worked as a Physiotherapist in Spring Cottage, Skelwith Bridge, Cumbria.
- Her obituary was published in The Westmorland Gazette in Jul 2014.

8-John Francis Oliver King was born in 1894 in Rainow, Cheshire, died on 4 May 1924 in Davas Dorf, Switzerland at age 30, and was buried on 7 May 1924 in Davas Dorf, Switzerland.

Michael Finch has compiled the following tribute to Joseph Sewell, former Chair and Treasurer of School Committee.

Joe, as he liked to be called, was born in Whitby, Yorkshire on 9th June 1917, and the first of four children to Olive and Joseph King Sewell, wholesale grocers and birthright members of the Society of Friends. After primary school, Joe went to Ackworth Friends School along with his brother and two sisters. He excelled at Mathematics, and accountancy was his chosen direction from an early age. He was articled in Middlesbrough and after outstanding results in national accountancy exams he joined Price Waterhouse in London in 1939 at the age of 22. During the Second World War he registered as a conscientious objector and as an alternative to military service he was allowed to serve as Finance Officer for the Friends Relief Service (FRS). He returned to Price Waterhouse in 1946 and became a partner at the age of 50. He stayed with Price Waterhouse for the rest of his working life. Joe married Gwen in 1944 having met her whilst auditing an FRS youth camp that she, as a youth worker, had been organising. They had three children, Jennifer, Christopher and Janet. The family lived first in Ruislip, then Wembley, Hatch End and finally Northwood and were active members of Harrow Friends Meeting. Sadly Gwen died in 1976 just before Joe retired. I first came in to contact with Joe in 1974 when I joined the School Committee, and he was about to be appointed its Treasurer, a position he held from July 1975 until December 1983. He was also Chair of School Committee from November 1979 until December 1981. It was also a happy fate that my friend Janet Eavis also joined the Committee at that time. It meant the beginning of a 'second life' for Joe for he and Janet were married in December 1977. Joe's contribution to Sibford School was immense; his keen mind, accounting ability and humanity helped the school through a difficult financial time as it modified itself to suit the demands of late twentieth-century Life. I was appointed Chair of Finance and Premises Committee in the School Committee restructuring in 1977 and I shall always revere his memory for his friendship, counselling, integrity and guidance in so many aspects. When Joe and Janet moved to Beaconsfield they joined Jordans Meeting where they were both members until Joe's death on 27th April 2011. Joe loved the company of his children and delighted in watching the family of nine grandchildren and seven great grandchildren grow. Only a fortnight before his death he had enjoyed a family party to celebrate Janet's eightieth birthday. In his life Joe enjoyed two long and happy marriages, of 32 years to Gwen and 33 years to Janet. It seemed very appropriate that a Memorial Meeting was held at Jordans on 21st May 2011 when a packed meeting house of family, friends and old scholars gave thanks for Joe's remarkable life.

Noted events in his life were:

- He was educated at Ackworth School.
- He worked as an Articled Accountant in Middlesbrough, Yorkshire.
- He worked as an Accountant, Price-Waterhouse in 1939 in London.
- Miscellaneous: Conscientious Objector.

Joseph married Gwenyth K. Monks in 1944. Gwenyth was born in 1917 in Epping, Essex and died in 1976 at age 59. They had three children: Jennifer, Christopher, and Janet.

Joseph next married Janet Eavis.

9-Edward Dell Sewell was born on 16 Jan 1921 in Whitby, Yorkshire and died on 6 Dec 2013 at age 92.

General Notes: Edward Dell Sewell

16 i 1921 - 6 xii 2013

Edward Dell Sewell was born in Whitby on 16 January 1921 into a family of wholesale grocers. He was one of four children who were brought up into a strict but loving family of Quakers who had served the Whitby Quaker community for generations. After being educated locally, Dell went to Ackworth School from 1932 until 1937. Dell's elder brother, Joseph, and his sisters, Greta and Stella, were also pupils there, Dell being the last surviving sibling. Dell retained a love of Ackworth School throughout his life and served the East Coast Guild in many capacities. Dell had various jobs in France with the Quaker Relief Service during World War II and after the war he met his first wife, Denise. They were married soon after. Due to his father's illness, Dell returned to the family business and remained in Whitby for the rest of his life. Like his parents and grandparents, Dell became an indispensable part of Quaker life and activity in Whitby and, during difficult times of falling membership and the increasing cost of a large old meeting house, Dell, Stella and their mother kept the meeting afloat, Dell serving as clerk for over 30 years and continuing, almost, singlehandedly, after his mother's death and Stella's illness. Although Dell had within him a deep spirituality, he was very much down to earth when necessary. He was always understanding and Friends valued his contributions in discussions and at meetings for business. Dell never gave ministry in meetings for worship and only occasionally would read from Advices and Queries or Quaker faith & practice, but his presence was felt in meeting. Latterly, Dell felt himself at odds with some of the stances and changes in the Society of Friends but always tried to think reasonably and see the other point of view.

His wisdom was often appreciated in Quaker committees and in the many organisations in Whitby with which he was associated. The biggest debt to Dell is owed by the Society of Friends, both in Whitby and further afield, where he gave unstinted service. One of his strengths was his determination to see that things were done in right ordering. Dell was an enthusiastic and energetic man with a keenness for music, dancing, bowls and good wine, a keenness which he maintained well into 'young' old age. When Dell passed away on 6 December 2013 in his 93rd year, all who had been touched by him felt the loss of a good man, a loving husband and father, grandfather and great grandfather. He was a good example of Quaker ethics and integrity to Friends (and friends) and to a wide community. Dell leaves a widow (his second wife Margaret), two sons (Denis and Michael), two grandchildren and one great grandchild. We give thanks for Dell Sewell's life. Signed in and on behalf of Pickering & Hull Area Meeting, held at Hull on 9 March 2014 Christine Fellows, Clerk

7-Joseph Foster<sup>4,55,74</sup> was born on 9 Mar 1844 in Sunnyside, Sunderland, County Durham, died on 29 Jul 1905 in 21 Boundary Road, St. John's Wood, London at age 61, and was buried in Kensal Green Cemetery, London.

General Notes: Author of 'Alumni Oxonienses', 'The British Peerage' etc. His principal works are listed in 'Men and Women of the Time'.

Foster, Joseph (1844-1905), genealogist and antiquary, born at Sunnyside, Sunderland, on 9 March 1844, was the eldest of five sons and three daughters of Joseph Foster, a woollen draper of Bishopwearmouth, co. Durham, and his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Emanuel Taylor. His grandfather was Myles Birket Foster (1785-1861), founder of the London bottling firm. His uncle, also named (Myles) Birket Foster (1825-1899), a painter, had encouraged his early interest in genealogy. Educated privately, Foster began business as a printer in London. He took to genealogical research and it appears that he may have wanted to become a herald. Although he retained a close friendship with several of the officers of arms throughout his life, and was granted unreserved access to the records, he never received an invitation. Foster's first work was on his Quaker ancestry, Some Account of the Pedigree of the Forsters of Cold Hesledon, Co. Durham (1862). He married, on 12 August 1869, Catherine Clark, eldest daughter of George Pocock of Burgess Hill, Sussex, and they had two sons and three daughters. In 1871 Foster privately printed The King of Arms, and in the meantime continued his assiduous genealogical researches, publishing extensive pedigrees and histories of several northern families, including another of his own. In 1873 the first part of his projected Pedigrees of the County Families of England appeared as Lancashire County Families, soon followed by three volumes of Yorkshire County Families (1874). In 1875 he published an edition of Robert Glover's Visitations of Yorkshire, and began the marathon task of transcribing the admission registers of the four inns of court. In 1879, in collaboration with Edward Bellasis, Bluemantle pursuivant at the College of Arms, Foster produced the Peerage, Baronetage and Knightage, based upon the earlier Lodge's Peerage. He exposed the mythical ancestries admitted for publication by his predecessors and introduced brilliant new artwork along with a section entitled 'Chaos' dealing with baronetcies of doubtful creation. Stephen Tucker, Rouge Croix pursuivant, attacked Foster particularly over the heraldic illustrations and blazonry (The Genealogist, 4 1880, 64). Foster and Bellasis defended themselves in A Review of a Review of Joseph Foster's 'Peerage' (1880). In Lodge's Peerage of 1903, Foster lambasted his adversaries in a brilliant introduction which reverberates with words and the style of the renowned genealogist Horace Round, whose disdain for some of his fellow professionals knew no bounds. It is possible that Round wrote much of the piece himself: he certainly aided Foster in publishing a series entitled Collectanea Genealogica et Heraldica (1881-5), which contained much trenchant criticism and exposure of contemporary genealogical myths. In it he printed transcriptions of legal and other registers and genealogical researches. Some of the volumes, such as Members of Parliament, Scotland, 1357-1882 (1882), were reissued separately, while others were left incomplete. Foster's prolific transcription work was published in Men at the Bar (1885); The register of admissions to Gray's Inn (1557-1859), together with ... marriages in Gray's Inn Chapel (1889); Index ecclesiasticus, or, Alphabetical lists of all ecclesiastical dignitaries in England and Wales since the Reformation (1890); and several editions of Heralds' Visitations, among other works on heraldry and genealogy. Never averse to building upon the work of others, Foster founded much of his reputation on the transcriptions made by Colonel Joseph Lemuel Chester (1821-1882) and George Edward Cokayne, (1825-1911), which he printed and published as his own editions. The London bookseller Bernard Quaritch purchased other works of Chester and Cokayne, and prevailed upon Foster to publish the Oxford matriculation register and the bishop of London's register of marriage licences. The latter appeared as London Marriage Licences (1521-1869) in 1887, and the former, alphabetically arranged, under the title Alumni Oxonienses, of which four volumes, covering the period 1715-1886, appeared in 1887, and another four volumes, covering the period 1500-1714, in 1891. Foster had copiously supplemented Chester's work from his own researches and the university awarded him the honorary degree of MA in 1892. The next year he carried his work a stage further in Oxford Men and their Colleges. In later life Foster published further works on heraldry. Concerning the Beginnings ... of Heraldry as Related to untitled Persons appeared in 1887, and Some Feudal Coats of Arms in 1902. The eighth Lord Howard de Walden sponsored the De Walden Library to which Foster contributed A Tudor Book of Arms, Some Feudal Lords and their Seals and Banners, Standards and Badges (1904). Foster's work was severely censured by Oswald Barron in The Ancestor for alleged lack of scholarship and knowledge, to which he replied in two pamphlets, A Herald Extraordinary and A Comedy of Errors (1902-3).

Foster died at his home, 21 Boundary Road, St John's Wood, London, on 29 July 1905. He was buried in London at Kensal Green cemetery; his name was also inscribed on a memorial stone in Bishopwearmouth cemetery. In his will (proved 10 November 1905), he left his widow £86 2s. 2d.- his entire personal estate, and a measure of the small profit he had realized from a lifetime of ardent work. His library of much annotated books and manuscripts was dispersed at his death. Four volumes of grants of arms were secured for the British Museum Library (Add. MSS 37147- 37150) and subsequently edited for publication (1915-16) by W. Harry Rylands. Foster was no scholarly antiquary, but his energy as a transcriber and collector of genealogical and heraldic data has few parallels, and many of his publications remained classic resources, several of permanent value.

York School at Midsummer, 1826; he is, moreover, the only remaining link between the School as it was in the time of John Bright and the present day. In a delightful letter, giving us this information, he adds, "A stupid lad," but, when we consider the success of his life, this statement is certainly one which may give encouragement to some of us. He remembers vividly, he tells us in this same letter, "one of the older boys, Joe Mennell, first lieutenant to 'Billy' Simpson, who used to fetch his gun, and load it for him, when he shot rats in the Foss ditch out of the schoolroom windows during lessons." This practice, "lest one good custom should corrupt the world," has, we believe, been long since abandoned, but it must have afforded the pupils many a thrilling moment! But Mr. Foster's recollections are not confined to such incidents as these. He tells us how, while he was at school, Jonathan Martin set fire to the Minster, and how, when the boys were taken to the Cathedral, as happened soon afterwards, he cut a piece of charcoal from one of the burnt beams. He recollects going to the Retreat in summer to play cricket, and in the winter to fields flooded by the overflow of the Foss, where the boys skated. The recollection, too, of the State entry of His Majesty George the Fourth's judges into the City, a function witnessed by the boys from Robert Waller's garden, still lives in his memory. Of Barbara Waller, the Matron, Mr. Foster says that "she could only speak in a whisper, but was one of the kindest and sweetest women that ever lived." Among the masters were Lovell Squire, who subsequently published at least one volume of poems, and a Mr. Davidson, a Scotchman, who taught Latin and mathematics. Chief among the ministering Friends of his time were, he tells us, a cousin of his mother's, James Backhouse—a not unfamiliar name to many succeeding generations of Old York Scholars—Samuel Tuke and Ann Alexander. That Joseph Rowntree (who took the greatest interest in the education of the boys), Joseph King, and indeed York Friends generally, showed continual kindness to the school, cannot cause surprise to any Bootham boy. Indeed, we believe that the high regard and affectionate memory in which the Meeting, and the City of York itself, are held by those who have been at Bootham, are due in great measure to the kindly personal interest which, from that distant day to the present, Friends have so consistently shown to the boys. It has become, we might say, a tradition of York Meeting, and is one to which the school is deeply indebted. There can be few, indeed, among Old Boys who are not able to look back with gratitude to times of social intercourse at the hospitable tables, and in the houses and gardens, of Friends—times which were so pleasant, both in anticipation and realization, and did so much to relieve the necessary monotony of school life routine.

Bootham School Magazine - September 1902 -----

On November 4th, 1905, there passed to his reward the father of the Old York Scholars Association. John Harrison Foster was born of an old Quaker family at North Shields, on January 22nd, 1818. He was sent to school at York, when little more than 8 years old, and was there when the lunatic Jonathan Martin set fire to the Minster. John Foster's first school days, if not all, were passed at the old school-house outside Walmgate Bar—where the master, "Billy Simpson," used to shoot rats in the "Foss Ditch" from the schoolroom window during lesson hours. He was also under the tutorship of John Ford, and although the former at any rate of these pedagogues would probably not have taken high rank among the teachers of to-day, there must have been something very sound in the methods of training of both to turn out such men as Mr. Foster and his elder brothers, his cousins Robert, John and Joseph Spence, John and Henry King, and the still more noted John Bright. Mr. Foster's grandfather was a man of remarkable qualities. It must have been much against "Friends' principles" when Robert Foster (the elder) took to a seafaring life, and served on a Man-of-war in the West Indies, against the French. So great was his ability that on one occasion he was given the command of the Pelican, when her Captain fell. He so ably handled her, that he saved the situation, and was made a Lieutenant in the Royal Navy. Robert Foster is thus alluded to in a letter of Southey's:—"Wordsworth sent me a man the other day" who was worth seeing. He looked like the First "Assassin in Macbeth, from his costume, but he was" a rare man. He had been a Lieutenant in the "Navy, was scholar enough to quote Virgil aptly, "had turned Quaker, and is now a dealer in wool at" a place called Sedbergh, Yorkshire. He has seen "much and thought much. His head is well stored, "and his heart in the right place." In 1829 John Foster's parents settled in London, and in 1832 he was removed from school to enter his father's business, which in later years grew to be the very considerable firm of Messrs. M. B. Foster & Sons, Marylebone Road, London. Mr. Foster's boyish recollections of London were surprisingly interesting; he knew it when there were green fields between Edgware Road and Hampstead, and he used to describe, with much vividness, the Coronation procession of King William IV and Queen Adelaide, which his father took him to see. As soon as he reached the age of 21, Mr. Foster and his elder brother, Dodshon Foster (who was his partner in the business) left the Society of Friends, and were baptized into the Church of England, and from that time till his death, the English Church commanded his devoted affection. He became an ardent Church worker; from the first he taught in Sunday Schools, and formed the habit, probably from his Quaker training, of dedicating to God at least a tenth part of his income. Mr. Foster lived in London until 1862, when he settled in the beautiful village of Witley, in Surrey, where his younger brother Birket Foster, the water colour painter, had gone to live a few years before. Mr. Foster found in the Vicar of Witley (the Rev. John Chandler, famous as a hymn writer and translator) a very good friend, and when he became a member of the old Surrey Church Association, he was brought into contact with Dr. Samuel Wilberforce, then Bishop of Winchester, for whom John Foster had an enthusiastic admiration. At Witley, Mr. Foster devoted himself to good works; he began to beautify, as he was able, the ancient parish Church; he built a school, which was used for service on Sundays, and made another school suitable for the same, in outlying districts of the parish; erected the Witley Institute for working men in 1883; rebuilt most of his cottages in 1883-5! and thoroughly restored the fine old parish Church in 1888-9. His gifts were not confined to Witley alone; he helped in the formation of a girls' Church School at Bramley, near Guildford, and was the anonymous donor of the fine organ which was placed in the restored Cathedral of Peterborough. Mr. Foster was for many years a Governor of the Bethlem and Bridewell Hospitals, and took the liveliest interest in King Edward's School (belonging to the latter Charity) which removed to Witley from London about 40 years ago. As a Jubilee Memorial in 1887 he presented the handsome Gymnasium to the schools, and built the organ chamber to supplement the gift of an organ to the Chapel by another Governor. It was joy to him to welcome numbers of the boys to his home at Christmas time, when it was their custom to sing Carols. John Foster was gifted with a very beautiful voice, which he never lost in extreme old age, and was often to be heard singing to himself a Tyneside ballad, or a Scotch song; but his reading can never be forgotten by those who heard it. As he read the Bible, either the lessons in Church, or at family prayers, all the beauty of his voice, his dramatic power, and the whole reverent soul of the man, were poured into the reading. But to know Mr. Foster really, it was necessary to see him in his home. There was about his house an atmosphere of that old Quaker peace and unworldliness which startled modern men. He was a perfect host, utterly unselfish, with the tender, old-fashioned courtesy of manner, which to-day is almost gone. Affectionate, gentle, and considerate, he was also a brilliant raconteur, and his strong sense of humour emphasized his rare gift of "style" in telling a story. To the end his brightness, like his devotion, remained undimmed. Troubles came to him in his later years; worries from business, and the sufferings which blindness and helplessness entail, but they never disturbed the perfect calm, which came from his faith in God. J. F. in Bootham magazine February 1906

Noted events in his life were:

- He was educated at Lawrence Street School (later became Bootham School) in 1829-1831 in York, Yorkshire.
- He worked as a Wholesale beer bottler and aerated water manufacturer.

John married Mary Hesletine Howes,<sup>4,12</sup> daughter of George Pigott Howes, on 24 May 1849. Mary was born in 1819 in London, was christened on 7 Nov 1819 in St James's, Paddington, London, and died on 11 Aug 1882 at age 63. They had five children: Edith, Alice Mary, Amy Gertrude, Fanny Isabel, and Walter John.

General Notes: Foster, (Myles) Birket (1825'961899), painter and illustrator, was born at 2 Rosella Place, North Shields, Northumberland, on 4 February 1825, fifth son of Myles Birket Foster (1785'961861) and his wife, Ann (1790'961884), daughter of Joseph King of Newcastle upon Tyne. Both parents came from prosperous north country families, staunch adherents of the Society of Friends, more commonly known as Quakers. From early childhood Birket Foster lived in London, where his father founded M. B. Foster & Sons, which became the largest firm of bottlers in the world, remaining in family ownership until 1957. Birket Foster was educated at a Quaker boarding-school in Tottenham, Middlesex, and Isaac Brown's academy, Hitchin, Hertfordshire (c.1835'961840), where his natural flair for drawing was encouraged. He wished to be a landscape painter, but at the age of sixteen entered the family business with little enthusiasm and near fatal results, owing to an accident with a broken bottle.

After this event, Birket Foster was placed by his kindly father in the studio of Ebenezer Landells, who had been a pupil of Thomas Bewick, the celebrated Newcastle engraver. Landells soon recognized that Birket Foster had an original talent as a draughtsman and eventually most of his time was spent in drawing on wood for engraving, including work for the Illustrated London News; however, signed contributions by him appeared only after he had left Landells in 1846. Many of his illustrations were engraved by Edmund Evans, a lifelong friend, with whom he travelled for an Illustrated London News series entitled 'The watering places of England'. Characteristic vignettes by Birket Foster appeared in The Boys' Country Year Book (1847) commissioned by Henry Vizetelly, engraver and publisher, who was to have an important influence on his career. In 1850 Vizetelly arranged for him to work on Evangeline by H. W. Longfellow: it was the success of these illustrations that set a vogue for the Birket Foster style. The critic of The Athenaeum praised the book, commenting that 'Mr Foster's designs in particular have a picturesque grace and elegance' (Huish, 10). Subjects for Longfellow's Hyperion (1852) were sketched with Vizetelly in that year, during a tour of Germany, Switzerland, and the Austrian Tyrol. Christmas with the Poets (1851), devised and engraved by Vizetelly and illustrated throughout by Birket Foster, was selected by the trustees of the British Museum for display at the Great Exhibition of 1851 as a fine example of contemporary illustration and printing. Birket Foster was to become the most sought after poetry illustrator of the day, associated with all the popular names, including Sir Walter Scott. His illustrations for Scott's Lay of the Last Minstrel, engraved by Edmund Evans, were published by A. and C. Black, for whom he also worked on a series called Picturesque Guides, travelling to Wales, Scotland, and the Lakes. The 1855 edition of Milton's L'allegro and Il penseroso, published by W. Kent, notably includes etchings on steel by Birket Foster, an interesting example of his work without the intervention of an engraver; for The Hamlet by Thomas Warton (1859) he etched his own designs on copper. On 13 August 1850 Birket Foster married a cousin, Anne Spence (1825'961859), daughter of Robert Spence, banker, of Tynemouth, Northumberland. They had five children, including Myles Birket Foster (1851'961922), a musician of some note, and William Foster (1853'961924), painter and ornithologist. The couple lived in the St John's Wood area of London. Anne had always encouraged his ambition to paint, but died of tuberculosis in 1859 before his achievement in this field was recognized by his election as an associate of the Society of Painters in Water Colours in 1860. His success in this medium was instant and phenomenal. He wrote happily to his brother-in-law, 'commissions for pictures pour in and it is far more delightful working in colour' (Spence family letters, 19 Feb 1860). He further remarked that he knew his own style to be 'very peculiar', as he made a liberal use of body colour (admixture of white) and practised a dry, finely stippled technique that diverged widely from the traditional watercolour method. He had effectively pioneered a new style, one which was exactly to the taste of the public. The Milkmaid (1860), one of the best-known of his early watercolours (V&A), is an elaboration of an engraving in Milton's L'allegro: it was quite common for his watercolours to be based on previous illustrations.

1862, the year in which Birket Foster was made a full member of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, also saw publication of Birket Foster's Pictures of English Landscape, a series of typical countryside scenes, engraved by the brothers Dalziel. In a letter to the Dalziels, John Ruskin described the plates in this handsome book as 'peculiarly good of their class' 'rich, gracefully composed, exquisite book illustrations' (The Brothers Dalziel, 154). Many of the subjects had been sketched in the villages and lanes of Surrey, where in 1863 Birket Foster built a large house at Witley, near Godalming. This essay in the Victorian Tudor style was set in about 20 acres on an elevated site and named The Hill (dem. 1953). It was one of the first houses to be extensively decorated by the firm of Morris, Marshall, Faulkner & Co., with wallpapers and tapestries by William Morris and also stained glass, tiles, and furniture to the designs of Edward Burne-Jones and his circle. On 25 August 1864 Birket Foster married Frances Watson (1841'961921), daughter of Dawson Watson, a solicitor, and sister of the watercolourist John Dawson Watson. Although sixteen years younger than Foster, she proved a capable chatelaine for The Hill, where fellow artists were frequently entertained, including Frederick Walker and W. Q. Orchardson; Orchardson's portrait of the second Mrs Birket Foster was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1868.

Pretty children in flowery lanes continued to be Birket Foster's most popular subjects, but a more topographical and architectural element appears in his work towards the end of the 1860s. 'The Italian Palazzi have been touched with a ready dainty hand', commented the critic of the Art Journal, describing Foster's Bellagio, which was exhibited with the Watercolour Society in 1867, following his first visit to Italy in 1866. He visited Italy again with Orchardson in 1868 and made several trips to Venice between 1871 and 1876 to execute fifty watercolour views of that city, commissioned by the MP Charles Seely for a fee of £5000. Brittany: a Series of Thirty Five Sketches by Birket Foster was published by the artist as a book of lithographs in 1878. In 1883 he was in Spain as part of a long continental tour; he made a final visit to France and Italy in 1887. Lithographs in Some Places of Note in England (1888) reflect his tours nearer home over a period of many years.

'Mine has been a very uneventful life, but one that my art has made very pleasant to me', wrote Birket Foster in biographical notes compiled in 1895 for the Royal Berlin Academy to which he had been elected an honorary member in 1874 (Archiv der Preussischen Akademie der Künste). In this reference he also lists a selection of his watercolours in order of significance, including On the Shore, Bonchurch, Isle of Wight (1862), The Meet (1869), and The Weald of Surrey (1870). The last two were among 110 works by Birket Foster in the important Barnet Lewis collection, auctioned at Christies on 28 February'963 March 1930. It is a comparatively recent custom to catalogue this artist under both forenames; in his lifetime, however, he always signed only as Birket Foster, or with the characteristic BF monogram. He painted few pictures in oils, mostly for exhibition at the Royal Academy, but did not care for the medium. His watercolours were much faked, usually in the form of loose copies of the numerous chromolithographs (colour prints) that featured his work.

Birket Foster sold The Hill for £10,000 in 1893 and moved to Braeside, The Heath, Weybridge, Surrey (dem. c.1970). Almost his entire collection of pictures was sold at Christies on 26 April 1894, including seven panels in oils by Edward Burne-Jones on the theme of St George and the dragon. He died on 27 March 1899 at Braeside and was buried on 1 April in Witley churchyard. All the leading newspapers and periodicals carried admiring tributes, but a later appreciation by the Dalziel brothers provides an apt summary: 'Birket Foster was a genuine man, kind and generous to a degree in all the ways of life. He stands as one of England's most popular landscape draughtsmen and as a painter in watercolour of great distinction' (The Brothers Dalziel, 138). A studio sale was held at Christies on 26'9627 June 1899, after which his estate was resworn at £35,323 14s. 4d. Centenary exhibitions were held at the Laing Art Gallery, Newcastle, in 1925 and Towneley Hall Art Gallery, Burnley, in 1999. The work of Birket Foster is represented in over fifty public collections; major holdings can be found in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, the Birmingham City Art Gallery, the Bristol Museum and Art Gallery, the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool, and the Henry E. Huntington Art Gallery, San Marino, California.

Captain Joseph King purchased this Flushing farmhouse from his father-in-law in 1801, his family and their descendants would live there until the 1930s. Captain King named his rural estate "Kingsland," and made improvements such as: adding gutters, installing window shutters, and plastering and painting the upstairs rooms as well as the kitchen wing. Upon returning from a voyage in 1805, Captain King continued to upgrade his estate. He covered most of the original clapboard siding with wood shingles, added a front porch, flush board siding that ran the length of the building, and constructed three out-buildings: a chicken coop, a mill, and a carriage house.

Captain King was a sea merchant and also a commercial farmer. He raised livestock and grew such staples as corn and wheat for profit. Hired laborers did most of the work on his sixty-acre farm. Although his father-in-law had resorted to using slaves, which was a common practice at that time, Captain King was opposed to slavery, and he sometimes employed fugitive slaves on his farm.

Captain King's daughter, Mary Ann, the first of his children to be born at Kingsland, married Lindley Murray at the Flushing Meeting House on what is now Northern Blvd in 1831. Mary Ann's oldest daughter, Mary (later known as Aunt Mary), devoted herself to the cause of helping African-Americans gain an equal footing in American life. She taught at a number of African-American Sunday schools and, in 1851, joined the Flushing Female Association, a Quaker group that established the town's only school for African-American children.

In 1839, Captain King's son - Joseph Harris King, married the daughter of James Bloodgood, owner of the Bloodgood Nursery. In the mid 1840s, he purchased a controlling interest in his father-in-law's nursery. Soon after he moved the nursery onto the Kingsland property, which was better situated on less expensive land. By the late 1850s, Joseph had brought his nephew, William King Murray (Mary Ann and Lindley Murray's second son), into the business.

William King Murray married Annie Cornelia Mitchell in 1868 and the couple moved into his childhood home, Kingsland, where they raised their children. William created an attic apartment for his older sister Mary, (Aunt Mary). Annie and William King Murray had five children: May, Edith, Joseph-Harris, and twins - Charnley and Ernest, who grew up at Kingsland in the late 1800s.

Aunt Mary resided in her attic apartment until 1908 when her nephew Joseph-Harris Murray moved in with his family. She then relocated to a house on Franklin Place where she died in 1920 at the age of eighty-eight. Much of what we know of Kingsland comes from the surviving fragments of her diary. It reveals, for example, that a telephone was installed in the house on January 15, 1903 and electric wiring on June 5,

The Murrays struggled to hold onto the old family property. Joseph Harris Murray moved out of Kingsland in 1911 and rented it out. Flushing had changed dramatically by 1920. Most of the land near Kingsland had been bought by real estate developers. Houses, largely one family, were being built all over. Apartment buildings and new, numbered streets were beginning to appear. In 1926, Kingsland was moved a few hundred feet south on the property so the Murrays could build a luxury apartment building which they would call "Kings Court" to capitalize on a proposed subway stop nearby. Joseph Harris Murray then moved his family back into Kingsland.

Unfortunately for the Murrays, the new subway stop was never built, and tenants were scarce due to the high rent at Kings Court. When the Great Depression came, Joseph Harris King moved into a Kings Court apartment, and in 1937 sold the house to the Dixon family.

Kingsland Homestead, one of the few surviving 18th century homes in Queens, was declared a New York City Landmark in 1965. It was the first structure in Queens to receive this honor. Threatened by the development of a shopping center and new houses, a group of concerned citizens, the Kingsland Preservation Committee, assisted by the Society for the Preservation of Long Island Antiquities, had the historic home moved in 1968 onto a modern foundation in Weeping Beech Park. Since the park was originally part of the Parsons Nursery and the historic site of America's first weeping beech tree, it was an appropriate location.

General Notes: From bingham@jaguarsystems.com 1998 Jul 24 02:10:56 Fri

Charles Doughty, who built the Kingsland House in 1785, was the son of Benjamin Doughty, a wealthy Quaker who purchased land on the "old turnpike" (now known as Northern Boulevard) in Flushing. The name "Kingsland" derives from Doughty's son-in-law, British sea captain Joseph King, who bought the home in 1801. This gambrel-roofed English shingle house is one of the few remaining examples of this type of architecture that was popular in the homes built on Long Island. The gambrel roof allowed houses to be both tall and wide, resulting in a fully usable attic and a properly supported chimney. Today Kingsland House serves a multi-faceted role in its present use as a research center, social history museum and architectural structure. The Queens Historical Society is located in Kingsland House and provides exhibits pertaining to the history of Queens County and New York City. Be sure to stop in and enjoy the current exhibit. As you descend the porch of Kingsland House and exit the gate, turn left and walk a few feet to the Weeping Beech Tree. Feel free to join neighborhood residents on one of the comfortable benches to enjoy this magnificent natural landmark. While taking your respite you might want to read the section entitled Additional Points of Interest. It will help give you a more complete history of Flushing.

General Notes: William G. Congdon, 86, Abstract Painter

By ROBERTA SMITH

Published: April 19, 1998 - The New York Times

William G. Congdon, an American painter well known in the 1950's and 60's for his painterly fusion of abstraction and representation and his depiction of religious themes, died of a heart attack on Wednesday, his 86th birthday, in a hospital in Milan, Italy. He had a home in Milan and had lived in Italy since the early 1950's.

A member of a socially prominent New England family, William Grosvenor Congdon was born in Providence, R.I., in 1912 and educated at the St. Mark's School in Southborough, Mass., and Yale University, where he received a bachelor's degree in English in 1934. He then took up sculpture, studying for four years in Philadelphia and Boston, and was becoming a fashionable sculptor when World War II began.

In 1942, Mr. Congdon volunteered for ambulance duty with the American Field Service and was attached to the British Eighth Army, which took him to Italy, Germany, Egypt and other parts of North Africa. He was one of the first Americans to enter the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp, making drawings that were later reproduced in a book he wrote about the experience. He spent 1946 and 1947 doing rehabilitation work with the American Friends Service Committee in Italy. Returning to the United States, he rented a cold-water studio on the Bowery in New York and began to paint, a change of media that he called his "first conversion." He disdained brushes in favor of poured paint, gold dust, slashing strokes made with a spatula and surfaces scratched with nails -- a working method in step with the direct, spontaneous paint-handling of the Abstract Expressionists. But Mr. Congdon never abandoned reality, creating instead impressionistic renditions of Venetian palazzi, Roman piazzas and New York skyscrapers.

His first show, at the Betty Parsons Gallery in 1949, sold out. In 1951, he was the subject of a profile in Life magazine, appearing on the cover. By then, Mr. Congdon had returned to Italy, living first in Rome, then Venice, Assisi and Milan. He continued to exhibit with Parsons until 1962, had one-person shows at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston and the Phillips Collection in Washington, and was included in numerous museum surveys of contemporary American art.

Throughout the late 1950's, Mr. Congdon traveled widely, seeking and finding inspiration in scenes of Athens and Istanbul, and in Indian temples, French cathedrals and Italian and Ceylonese landscapes. In 1959, in his "second conversion," he converted to Catholicism in Assisi and for several years painted Old and New Testament themes that were praised by such Catholic intellectuals as Jacques Maritain, Martin D'Arcy and Thomas Merton. In 1964, he attended the Eucharistic Congress in Bombay, India, traveling from Rome with Pope Paul VI.

After 1960, Mr. Congdon exhibited primarily in Italy and elsewhere in Europe. He also wrote magazine articles about his travels, and, in 1962, "In My Disc of Gold," a book about art and his religious conversion.

After the late 1960's, he concentrated on increasingly abstract renderings of landscapes. The most recent monograph on his work was published in 1995 in English and Italian with essays by Peter Selz and Fred Licht. He is represented in many collections, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Peggy Guggenheim Museum in Venice and the Benedictine Monastery in Subiaco, Italy.

Mr. Congdon is survived by three brothers, Johns H., of Little Compton, R.I.; Robert G., of Durham, N.H., and Theodore G., of Pasadena, Calif.

8-Capt. Johns Hopkins Congdon was born on 14 Jan 1916 in Providence, Rhode Island, USA, died on 5 Jan 2003 in St. Anne's Hospital, Rhode Island, USA at age 86, and was buried in St. John's Cemetery, Providence, Rhode Island, USA.

General Notes: JOHNS H. CONGDON

FALL RIVER -- Johns Hopkins Congdon, 86, of Grange Avenue, Little Compton, R.I., died Sunday, Jan. 5, 2003, at St. Anne's Hospital. He was the husband of Adeline Cole "Lally" (Simonds) Congdon; they were married 54 years.

Born in Providence, the son of the late G. Maurice and Caroline (Grosvenor) Congdon, he was active in Rhode Island civic and business circles for more than 30 years.

Mr. Congdon was the sixth in an unbroken family line to serve as president and chief executive officer of the Congdon and Carpenter Co. of Providence and Fall River, a steel service center where he went to work after graduation from college. He presided over the firm from 1957-77. Established in Providence in 1790, it was one of the oldest family-owned and operated companies in the United States until he sold it in 1977.

During his business life, he was active in many efforts during the 1950s and 1960s to improve the business and economic climate of Rhode Island. Examples were the Weekapoag Group and the Business Development Company of Rhode Island. He also was active in the Providence Chamber of Commerce and the United Way. He served briefly as president of Junior Achievement of Rhode Island and for five years as president of the Rhode Island Public Expenditure Council. He was a director of the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra and was twice chairman of its annual fund drive. He was a director of the Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank from 1949-84 and a trustee of Rhode Island Hospital from 1949-89.

He served on the Providence City Planning Commission during the administration of Mayor Joseph Doorley and on an advisory committee to the Rhode Island General Assembly, which led to the creation of the Legislative Council, advisory to the General Assembly.

After his retirement in 1977, he was an overseer and overseer emeritus of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He established a fellowship in memory of his mother that awards a scholarship every summer to a music student at Tanglewood, the summer home and school of the orchestra, in Lenox.

He was an honorary trustee of the Empire Brass quintet, a group that was organized in 1973 by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

After graduation from St. Mark's School in Southborough, he graduated from Yale University in 1938, where he was on the varsity track team.

A lifelong member of Grace Episcopal Church in Providence, he was a member of the vestry and the senior warden, as well as president of Grace Church Apartments, a HUD-subsidized housing complex for the elderly that was sponsored by the church. He was a member of the Hope Club in Providence, and the Sakonnet Golf Club and Warren's Point Beach Club in Little Compton.

He served in World War II with the 103rd Field Artillery of the Army, reaching the rank of captain. After service in the Pacific, he was awarded the Bronze Star.

Survivors include his widow; a son, Johns H. Congdon II of Charlotte, Vt.; a daughter, Abigail Congdon of Lincoln; a stepdaughter, Laurie Lisle of Ardsley-on-Hudson, N.Y.; two brothers, Robert Congdon of Durham, N.H., and Theodore Congdon of Pasadena, Calif.; and eight grandchildren.

He was the brother of the late Gilbert Congdon and William Congdon.

His memorial service will be at noon Saturday at Grace Episcopal Church, 175 Mathewson St., Providence. Burial will be private.

Arrangements are by the Cherry Place Home of Waring-Sullivan, 178 Winter St.

5-Ann King<sup>94</sup> died on 30 Mar 1902.

Ann married Samuel Horton Colton,<sup>94</sup> son of Reuben Colton. Samuel was born on 24 Nov 1802 in Long Meadow, Massachusetts, USA and died in 1871 in Chicago, Illinois, USA at age 69. They had five children: John Bowne, Mary R., Mary Rodman, Reuben, and Samuel Horton.

General Notes: Samuel Horton Colton was born November 24, 1802, in Long Meadow, a son of Reuben Colton and grandson of George Colton, both of whom were natives of the same town. Reuben Colton reared a family of four sons and one daughter, and died in 1825 at Chicago, Illinois. Samuel H. Colton learned the printer's trade and followed it until 1825. when he settled at Worcester, and joined John Milton Earle in the publication of the Worcester "Spy." They probably did most of the composition and printing themselves in that early day, and by close application to business were successful. Owing to failing health Mr. Colton retired from the firm of S. H. Colton & Company, publishers of the "Spy" and found restoration in outdoor occupation. For some time he conducted a nursery business, having grounds at the corner of Austin and Main streets, Worcester, where are now business blocks. He also cultivated ground in South Worcester, and after a time engaged in the insurance business in the city. He was universally esteemed and respected, and was often called to the service of his fellows in positions of responsibility. He died in Chicago in 1871. while on a business trip to the west. He married (first) October 6. 1830, Anna K. Earle, born October 12, 1806, died March 28, 1842, daughter of Timothy and Ruth (Keese) Earle, of Leicester, Massachusetts. Their only child, Samuel, died in early infancy. Mr. Colton married (second) Ann King, a native of New York, daughter of John and Mary B. King. John A. King was a London banker, came to New York in 1791, and became treasurer of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, continuing until his death. He married, in 1801. Mary B. Bowne, born 1777, in Flushing, Long Island, daughter of James and Caroline (Rodman) Bowne. She was the mother of three sons and seven daughters. All the daughters married and lived in New York, where the last survivor died in 1898, at the age of eighty-three years. The only son to grow to maturity was John Bowne King, long a prominent physician at Pawtucket, Rhode Island. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Colton were the parents of a number of children, four of whom grew to maturity, namely: i. John Bowne, was long active in managing the Bay State Shoe Company, from which he retired in 1895. 2. Mary, unmarried, resides in Worcester. 3. Reuben, resides in Boston. 4. Samuel H., educated at the Friends' School at Providence, and was long engaged in business at Worcester ; for fourteen years he was treasurer of the Wright & Colton Wire Company, now known as the Wright Wire Company, from which he retired in 1899; since then most of his time was devoted to outdoor experiments at his estate called Red Farm, in Millbury, Massachusetts; he attained success in rearing a herd of Angora goats, and continually engaged in agricultural developments ; he made plans to accompany Donald B. McMillan on his expedition to Greenland, as a hunter in the interest of the American Museum of Natural History, but circumstances forced him to abandon the trip ; he died July 3, 1913, at Red Farm ; he was a member of the Worcester Club and a member of All Saints' (Protestant Episcopal) Church; he married Elizabeth Slater Howe, of Worcester, daughter of the late James H. Howe ; children, all of whom survive him : Katharine, married Lorin Coes ; Samuel H. ; James Howe ; John Bowne ; Sydney ; Rodman ; Susanna B. ; Eleanor K.

General Notes: PRISCILLA COES BEAN - GRAND ISLE - Priscilla Coes Bean passed away early Friday, Feb. 8, 2013, at her home in Grand Isle, with her husband by her side. Patsy was born July 15, 1947, in Ware, Mass., to Loring Coes Jr. and Elizabeth (Carlton/Coes) Newhall. In her early years, she lived in Brookfield, Mass., and attended the Bancroft School in Worcester, Mass. As a teenager, she split her time between Princeton, Mass., - and North Waterford, Maine, where she graduated from Oxford Hills High School in 1965. She began working at the Advertiser Democrat newspaper in Norway, Maine, where her stepfather, Stanley Newhall was editor. On July 22, 1967, she married Robert A. Bean in South Paris, Maine, and they lived in the Orono and Portland areas for the next few years while Bob finished college. In 1971, Patsy and Bob moved to Vermont, eventually settling at their home in Grand Isle, where they have lived for the past 36 years. Patsy had a long career in retail management as a Clothing Buyer and Store Manager for both The Alpine Shop and Climb High. After her first battle with cancer in 1998, she decided that life is too short and

"retired" at the age of 50. Patsy was passionate about many things. She loved puttering in the woodshop and supervising Bob around the power tools, where they designed numerous picture frames and Adirondack chairs, all made from her vision without a pattern. She was an accomplished artist and studied under Lajos Matolcsy while living in Maine. She created many treasured pieces of art over the years. She was a cherished "Nene" to her granddaughter, Taylor, and loved spending time with her, especially their shopping trips. Patsy took great pride in maintaining her property in Grand Isle and made sure something was always in bloom. She loved time on the water, sailing on Lake Champlain and her memorable charter trips with friends to the Virgin Islands. She was a member of the Alburg Golf Links where she enjoyed many hours playing golf with her dear golf friends. In 2010, Patsy was Senior Ladies Champion, and in 2011 she and Bob were Husband and Wife Champions. She had great memories of her trips with Bob to Scotland and Ireland, playing on some legendary courses. Patsy was predeceased by her father and mother; along with her parents-in-law, Ashley R. and Virginia (Jewell) Bean. She is survived by her devoted husband of 45 years, Bob Bean; daughter, Sarah Rocheleau and husband, Dana, and granddaughter, Taylor, of Georgia, Vt.; son, Rob Bean of Burlington, and her granddogs, Charlie and Rufus. She leaves her sister, Martha Thayer and husband, Dr. John Thayer, of Rutland, Mass.; and brother, Loring Coes III "Terry" and wife, Dana, of Wakefield, R.I. Patsy is also survived by Bob's sisters and their husbands, Brenda and Bob Richardson of Norway, Maine, Deborah and Ron Sherub of Dade City, Fla., and Barbara and Carl Bishop of Hebron, Maine. She also leaves several nieces and nephews. Patsy's family would like to thank Dr. Ades and his staff in the Oncology Department at FAHC, along with the nurses from the VNA for their caring dedication to Patsy during her illness. A celebration of Patsy's life will be held early this summer in the Champlain Islands. Private messages of condolence to Patsy's family are welcome at www.healdfuneralhome.com. In lieu of flowers, please consider a donation to either the Visiting Nurses Association of Chittenden and Grand Isle County, 1110 Prim Road, Colchester, VT 05446; or Friends of Northern Lake Champlain, P.O.
