The death in France of Mr. Colin Priestman, nephew of Mr. Frederick Priestman, of Bradford, while serving with the Friends' Ambulance Unit, calls attention to the -wonderful -work the Society of friends has been performing since the outbreak of war. The chairman of a military service tribunal in a district where there were many conscientious objectors once remarked that there seemed no place in the world to-day for the conscientious objectors. The members, of the Society of Friends are conscientious objectors, but they have made for themselves a place of no small importance in the scheme of things to-day. The young men of the society are precluded by their religious principles from enlisting in the Army, but they hold themselves free to repair the ravages of war, and this task they have performed in many ways in nearly all the theatres of war without, fee or reward. The Friends' Ambulance Unit started in 1914 as the First Anglo-Belgian Ambulance Unit, and the object of it was to supplement the military medical services attached to all modern armies. From this beginning the work grew. Hospitals were established, sanitary work was undertaken, and the organisation soon spread beyond Belgium. The work of the unit, however, important it is, does not exhaust the war effort of the society. A War Victims' Relief Committee was formed shortly afterwards, and the work that it has done is beyond all praise. It has relieved the sufferings of the civilian population in the war zone, helped to restore devastated regions by buildings, &c., and has accomplished valuable work in helping to restore agriculture in the departments of the Marne and the Meuse. Finally, the society has not confined its attentions solely to the citizens of Allied countries. There is also an emergency committee for the assistance of Germans, Austrians, and Hungarians in distress, and in the report for the year ended June 30, 1917, it was stated that more than 5,000 cases of need had been dealt with in London alone.

Basic notes:

He was educated at Ackworth School. He worked as a Corn Miller, Worsted manufacturer in Bradford, Yorkshire. He worked as a founder of the Friends Provident Assurance Co. in Bradford, Yorkshire. PRIESTMAN, JOHN (1805-1866), Quaker, son of Joshua and Hannah Priestman, was born at Thornton, near Pickering, Yorkshire, where his ancestors sturdy yeomen and Quakers had been settled for more than two hundred years. He was educated at the Friends' school, Ackworth, Yorkshire, and apprenticed to an uncle, a tanner at York, but at nineteen joined his brother-in-law, James Ellis, in the Old Corn Mill, Bradford. Together they founded the first ragged school in Bradford, in a room at the top of one of their mills. The teacher's salary was privately defrayed by them. Priestman was one of the founders in 1832 of the Friends' Provident Institution, a society whose conspicuous success was due to economic management and the temperate habits of the members, and he remained on the board of directors until his death. In early life Priestman became a free trader, and entered warmly into the anti corn law agitation. He represented Bradford at many of the conferences called by the league, and used all his influence to keep alive the agitation in the north of England. Priestman and his partner, Ellis, actively resisted the collection of church-rates. For refusal to pay the rate for 1835 they were summoned before the magistrates, and pleaded with such cogency the illegality of the impost that the rate was not levied again in their parish. Chiefly from a desire to utilise the Prime 378 Primrose waste power of machinery in his mills, Priestman, in 1838, commenced manufacturing worsted goods in an upper room. Discovering that the weaver's shuttle generated wealth more easily than the millstone, he removed to larger premises in 1845, and in 1855 he abandoned corn-milling altogether. His treatment of the mill hands, chiefly women and girls, was sympathetic and enlightened, and their tone grew so refined that his works obtained the title of 'Lady Mills.' He introduced with success a system of profit-sharing among the superior workpeople. Much of his time and means was also devoted to the causes of peace and temperance. From 1834, when the Preston 'teetotallers' first visited Bradford, he adopted total abstinence. At the same time he and his partner relinquished malt-crushing, the most profitable part of their milling business. He was one of the few supporters of Cobden in his condemnation of the Crimean war (1854), and seconded the unpopular resolution proposed by him at a great meeting at Leeds in that year. Sternly adhering to Quaker principles through life, he died at Whetley Hill, Bradford, on 29 Oct. 1866, aged 61, and was buried on 2 Nov. in the Undercliffe cemetery, Bradford. Eleven hundred of his workpeople attended the funeral. Priestman married, first, on 28 Nov. 1833, Sarah, daughter of Joseph Burgess of Beaumont Lodge, Leicester, who died in 1849, leaving two sons, Edward and Frederick, and a daughter, who married Joseph Edmondson of Halifax. Secondly, he married, in 1852, Mary, daughter of Thomas Smith, miller, of Uxbridge, Middlesex, by whom he left two sons, Arnold, a landscape artist, and Walter. Letters received from brother officers state that Second-Lieutenant Kenneth Mallorie Priestman, R.E., elder son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Priestman, Hollin Grange, Ilkley, whose death in action, as already reported, occurred on August 31, at the age of 25, was out on reconnaissance work with his major at the time. A large fragment of shell hit Lieutenant Priestman in the spine, and he died immediately. The major was badly hit, as was another officer of the Pioneers. Lieutenant Priestman was killed in the advanced front line, and great difficulty was experienced in bringing his body in, as he had to be carried over a shell-swept zone, over the top, in full view of the enemy. He was buried in a cemetery, the chaplain conducting the service and men of Lieutenant Priestman's section acting as bearers. A cross is being erected to mark the grave. One of the writers says: "Your son was a particular friend of mine, and had always shown the acme of courage in action, clear-headed, and a good grasp of the situation in very awkward corners. We have lost a well-beloved comrade, and one of the best officers we ever had."

The death in France of Mr. Colin Priestman, nephew of Mr. Frederick Priestman, of Bradford, while serving with the- Friends' Ambulance Unit, calls attention to the -wonderful -work the Society of friends has been performing since the outbreak of war. The chairman of a military service tribunal in a district where there were many conscientious objectors once remarked that there seemed no place in the world to-day for the conscientious objectors. The members, of the Society of Friends are conscientious objectors, but they have made for themselves a place of no small importance in the scheme of things to-day. The young men of the society are precluded by their religious principles from enlisting in the Army, but they hold themselves free to repair the ravages of war, and this task they have performed in many ways in nearly all the theatres of war without, fee or reward. The Friends' Ambulance Unit started in 1914 as the First Anglo-Belgian Ambulance Unit, and the object of it was to supplement the military medical services attached to all modern armies. From this beginning the work grew. Hospitals were established, sanitary work was undertaken, and the organisation soon spread beyond Belgium. The work of the unit, however, important it is, does not exhaust the war effort of the society. A War Victims' Relief Committee was formed shortly afterwards, and the work that it has done is beyond all praise. It has relieved the sufferings of the civilian population in the war zone, helped to restore devastated regions by buildings, &c., and has accomplished valuable work in helping to restore agriculture in the departments of the Marne and the Meuse. Finally, the society has not confined its attentions solely to the citizens of Allied countries. There is also an emergency committee for the assistance of Germans, Austrians, and Hungarians in distress, and in the report for the year ended June 30, 1917, it was stated that more than 5,000 cases of need had been dealt with in London alone.
